

'Need sovereign cloud to safeguard digital infra'

Our Bureau
New Delhi

To protect national security and prevent geopolitical interference over its digital economy, the Centre for Digital Economy Policy Research (C-DEP Research) has proposed a structured pathway for India to progressively secure sovereign control over critical cloud infrastructure, data, operations and technology.

C-DEP Research said this in a report on "Pathways for Sovereign Cloud Adoption in India" released at the Defence Tech Day, organised by the United Service Institution of India, the oldest military think tank of India. Chief of Defence Staff General Raja Subramani was among the defence strategists and senior policy-makers from the Department of Telecommunications present at the event.

Recognising that complete technological sovereignty cannot be achieved immediately across every layer of the cloud stack, independent think tank C-DEP has proposed the Bharat Sovereign Cloud Assurance Levels Evaluation (B-SCALE), the report said as per a statement. The framework creates a staged pathway from external technology dependence towards progressively higher levels of Indian control.
