

Find the Flags

To Swim or Not to Swim... That is the First Question. If there is ever any Doubt, Don't Go Out!

Keep your family safe at the beach this summer. Before anyone enters the ocean, please locate the nearest flag. These flags fly for our protection.

The image below is pretty self-explanatory, but if you haven't seen the signs on the beach you might now know what these flags mean. So, green means the hazard is low, yellow indicates medium, red is for high, and black means definitely no swimming.

Before your family goes in the ocean, please find the flag to help her assess safety conditions, then consider your families swimming abilities. Rip-tides have been strong and plentiful recently. Some theorize this is related to recent Hurricane Florence. Regardless of the reason, be aware, find the flags, and keep your family safe!
