

Ascension Transfiguration and Transfusion

Transfigurative and Transformative Ascension

There have been two paths of ascension available unto ancient archetypes, Transfigurative and Transformative (transfusion). Transfigurative and Transformative archetypes are those relations that arrived from Sirius with vast spiritual knowledge and larger heads. Those of this nature are gifted at what is known as transfusion. Transfusion is a manner of ascending out of physicality altogether and into another realm of existence separate from the body.

Transfigurative Archetypes and Transfigurative Based Ascension

Transfigurative archetypes tend to rely upon transfiguration of thoughtform to ascend. Transfigurists thoughtform is of the middle road but through a very different journey of ascension in utilizing light waves. Transfusion language is the result of the unification of transformative action and transfigurative action thoughtform and into another set of sequences of light formations that one would consider Tao command based. An example of transfusion language is crop formations.

Transfiguration based ascension is a type of ascension that involves rising up the dimensions with Earth and as she ascends. This means having a complete ascension with the potential of taking the body with you. Many light workers rely upon transfigurative light based knowledge in their ascensions.

Transfiguration is a gift and talent expressed through time amongst those mastering self-realizing itself. Self-realization is not the mastery of many in this time period. Self-realizing itself is a sequence of dream that pervades less than ten percent of the current world population.

Transfiguration allows the meridian system to become light infused. Fuses of light form from the pallets up through each meridian of the leg, torso, arms, and cranium. Light fuses are anchored into the larger lay lines of the fusion body to sustain the light transfusion evenly throughout the form in the act of transfiguration.

Transfiguration requires an even dose of light wave synergy to foster which is why the meridian system becomes light infused. Light fuses are also stabilized in each organ, gland, or system during the act of full body transfiguration.

The act of transfiguration, transfusion waves are constructed from threads of light into a fabric that holds a particular shape. Transfusion waves move through the spine during the act of transfiguration to stimulate the nervous system to cause movement forward and backward in time.

Transfiguration involves the rearrangement of molecules into a different shape and genetic structure and then an instant manifestation of the associated form in physicality. Within a few hundred years of living upon Earth following our seeding; something happened that caused a rigidity of our molecules, and as this occurred, we lost our ability to transfigure.

Transfiguration creates fusion balls that are a large strip of light that is knotted together and then pressed up the spine or through the bones of the legs or arms to infuse light into the kundalini pathways. As light and kundalini fire intermixes, the entire body can be moved backwards or forwards in time leading to a full body transfiguration. Full body transfiguration requires someone to anchor that has a powerful capacity to hold high tantric fusion within their field and can be accomplished in as little as 8 hours with someone skilled and mastered at this gift of healing.

Transfigurative patterning is process that supports the transfiguration of each organ. This pattern is best used for transfiguration of small portions of the body only. Transfigurative patterning is a portion of a sphere that is placed at the bottom of each organ and constructed of a light fuse. Generally, one inward and one outward moving spiral is good for each organ or gland or region of the body to transfigure back in time or forward in time into health.

Transfiguration of objects or instant manifestation may grow to become more common and experienced more recurrently than other transcendental states amongst most destined to self-realize in this cycle. Mastering all transcendental states requires a ninety-eight percent light infused state. Most may become ill long before they would reach a ninety-eight percent light infused state due to DNA disturbances in the anthology. Transfiguration and instant manifestation demonstrations may begin at an eighty-six percent light infused state.

Transformative Archetypes Transfusion Based Ascension

Transformative archetypes rely upon transforming thoughtform to ascend. Transformatists analyze karmic sequences of the inheritances and archetypal nature along with the thoughtform at cause and transform it by unifying polarity into the middle path. This form of ascension is known as transfusion and is an ancient modality of departing the physical without dying and moving on as a human consciousness that is archetypally driven. In a deep sense, one ascends home to their human hologram. This type of ascension is not new, but the records of transfusion have just been recently recovered through the holographic archives of the ancient ones.

Transfusion based ascension is an inward focused process where the Consciousness returns Home to the Source, All That Is, or the Tao, through one's hologram, and the body is left behind in ascension. Transfusion allows the body to be released and the cellular knowledge to carry on in a nonphysical format from which one can rise to other dimensions of awareness due to relinquishing physicality. Transfusion is an inward focused process where the consciousness returns home to All That Is, the Source, or the Tao through one's hologram.

Transfusion is an act of running light to vaporize the density into a gaseous state of being in order to hold a higher octave of vibration. Light infusion is measured in octaves and not in segments of DNA embodied. Octaves measure up to over a million or more surrounding Earth as possible levels of mastery to be sustained. Octaves over 100,000 may lead, however, to the momentum into another vibration of physicality in which one may become semi etheric in appearance in the physical.

At this time, therefore, transfusion is not being configured to cause ascension into other levels of physicality as much as help to sustain the health of the biology for continued mastery over emotional patterning that is non-loving in nature.

The act of transfusion involves a fusion of light. The light penetrates the cellular structure allowing density to burn off gradually and over time. As enough density is released, the structure can burn up in a very slow and methodical manner extracting all the knowledge and records held therein such that they are transferred to the archetypal planes.

Light wave-based ascension is created through those of Tibetan lineage inheritance. Often, those of this inheritance are taller and thinner and do not develop a Buddha belly.

Light Wave DNA You can choose to turn the light back on and transfuse it as you once did as a child. The pituitary gland will again produce growth hormone, but for a different purpose. As light moves on the planet, you also have to grow light wave DNA to resonate and be in harmony with global change, into the Mother Sun Dream. The growth hormone you are producing again will allow light wave DNA to grow in you.

Incomplete Transfusion Leads to Incomplete Ascension.

Transfusion has been badly misused in times past to cause an increase of density rather than emerging level of mastery over the physical plane. There are forces that will use transfusion to transfuse density into other creations rather than transmute all the density that is of their own cause.

Incomplete transfusion is a form of incomplete ascension in which one fails to take full responsibility for all density contained within the biology. There are also many patterns of manipulation of fusion that shall be discussed in greater detail in the materials ahead.

Transfusion as with all other modalities of evolution has been misused over time to cause something other than a return journey Home.

Transfusion Pallets: Transfusion pallets are juncture points along the lay lines of light at the large meridian points along Earth's surface.

Transfiguration and transfusion require fusing into light pallets to draw the light into the small and large fusion bodies in large enough quantities to allow for transfiguration forward and backward in time.
