

MMW-1

The Liver In Ascension

The liver expands its ability to cleanse blood through the development of special filters for such things as heavy metals, pesticides, air pollutants and so on that find their way into the blood stream, through the release of stored toxins from the fat and ascending tissues, or in one's day to day eating habits and living environment. Such ducts expand the size of the liver by two thirds, which contributes to the expansion of the mid-drift in ascending humans. Additionally, there is a direct set of ducts to deposit oversized toxins into the intestinal tract with far greater ease and fluidity. This allows certain toxins that were very difficult to clear from a system to be able to be cleared with ease.

There are glands that had atrophied over time in the Liver that are related to the virus known as Hepatitis. The Hepatitis Virus was once a substance used to transmute certain toxins in crystalline cells into another useable material required for cell life. The Hepatitis Virus is converted in the crystalline blueprint back to its original function. The main cellular waste that this particular substance transmutes is anaerobic waste, or in other terms, a waste produced in the ingestion of sugar by the cell. The waste is transmuted into a form of salt required for the regeneration of the cell, and then is utilized for this purpose.

The liver also has the capacity to convert body fat to sugar if one's overall vibration requires such to be sustained. For the average human, one sustains one's vibration more through the breath, in which oxygen is collected by the lungs and given over to the crystalline diaphragm to be converted into blood sugar. However, in high times of stress, or if one is holding a higher vibration than usual say in going to the density of the city, the liver may begin to convert fat to provide enough sugar to sustain one's vibration.

How is vibration sustained? The cells holding a particular level of energy sustain the energy level of the form by altering the metabolism of the cell accordingly. In other terms, the higher the vibration, the more sugar that is required to sustain the energy of the crystalline cell, and the higher the metabolism of the form runs. As more sugar is required, the diaphragm inflates to collect more oxygen, and the liver will convert fat to sugar to provide for the needs of an increasing metabolism and vibration.

In ascension, the form is continually detoxifying and releasing what is no longer required and constructing a new structure that builds a bridge towards unity consciousness. The toxins released are too numerous to mention, and most are released either through the sweat glands and pores of the skin or filtered through the kidneys, liver and intestinal tract of the form.

If you have a weakness of the kidney, liver or intestinal tract, these patterns are addressed early in the ascension process to allow these organs to increase in their ability to support the detoxification process. You may need to support the body by flushing the system to allow those organs to increase their ability to detoxify. There are many kidney and liver flushes and herbs that can be utilized to support those organs, and we guide those who are ascending to make use of these things as they are so guided from within.

One of the easiest methods to flush all three of these organs simultaneously is simply to eat one watermelon per week for a six-week period. If watermelon is unavailable, grapes can be substituted in an equivalent amount. Both grapes and watermelon dissolves fats that have accumulated in the ducts of the liver and kidneys and cleanse the intestinal tract by providing a gentle form of bulk that will have a laxative effect. Some forms may require several months of this treatment.

Additionally, certain fruits contain digestive enzymes useful to the breaking down of the old dense cellular structure. These fruits include pineapple and papaya. These requirements are intermittent, and you simply need to pay attention to what the body requires in order to bring forth the next phase of ascension.

The liver also has the capacity to convert body fat to sugar if one's overall vibration requires such to be sustained. For the average human, one sustains one's vibration more through the breath, in which oxygen is collected by the lungs and given over to the crystalline diaphragm to be converted into blood sugar. However, in high times of stress, or if one is holding a higher vibration than usual say in going to the density of the city, the liver may begin to convert fat to provide enough sugar to sustain one's vibration.

How is vibration sustained? The cells holding a particular level of energy sustain the energy level of the form by altering the metabolism of the cell accordingly. In other terms, the higher the vibration, the more sugar that is required to sustain the energy of the crystalline cell, and the higher the metabolism of the form runs. As more sugar is required, the diaphragm inflates to collect more oxygen, and the liver will convert fat to sugar to provide for the needs of an increasing metabolism and vibration.

There are so many toxins in the current human expression and the liver is hard pressed to cleanse the system adequately. As a result, two additional waste removal organs about the size of a liver develop beginning at initiation 1,800 on either side of the waist. This causes the waist to expand in circumference. One sincerely can look pregnant in the latter phases of embracing ascension 100% into the biology.

Reversing Autoimmune Dysfunctions

We have had cases of autoimmune dysfunction in which the spleen, kidneys and liver were terribly compromised. In these test-case ascensions, the spleen, kidney and liver were addressed above and beyond the remainder of the form after transiting 1024

The blending of Sirian-Pleiadian DNA also created the first known ailments in the human form based upon the genetic records revealed to date. Such ailments include a form of tuberculosis in which the lungs would become laced with holes and fail to collect enough chi through the breath to sustain the blood sugar level requirements of a crystalline form. It also includes a form of pancreatic cancer, liver cancer, cancer of the spleen, and cancer of the nervous system. All such diseases have now been traced to half and half holographic origins and the blending of Sirian and Pleiadian DNA.

All diseases are founded upon a set of machinery that is constructed from the grid work of the form. In essence, Merduk mutilated Innana's grid work through her beloved, removing portions of her liver, kidney, spleen, heart, nervous system, uterus, and ovarian grid work, extending such grid work outside of the etheric body into a machine that perpetuated a loss of chi from such regions. Merduk then collected upon the chi to sustain his own life. The machinery also caused healthy grid work to be moved outside of the etheric body into other devices. Because the grid work was no longer present inside of the organs, Innana's organs began to decay and die as they were not receiving enough chi. It is etheric grid work that transfers chi to all parts of the form to sustain the life of the cellular structure.

Such diseases caused by Merduk include diabetes which is the result of the loss of grid work in the etheric pancreas; epilepsy which is the result of the loss of grid work in the spinal cord and nervous system; loss of eyesight which is the result of the loss of grid work in the eyes or optical nerve; parkinsonism which is the result of the loss of grid work in the brain; and heart disease which is the result of the loss of grid work of the heart, along with pancreas, liver or kidney cancer which is the result of the loss of grid work also in such regions.

Another initiate whom we shall name Larry developed cancer of the spleen, liver and kidneys. Such machinery sat outside of his solar plexus region and was constructed from the grid work once contained inside of the spleen, liver and kidneys. Chi was sent from the machinery to the Mahatma planes and the False Intervention. Again, as the machines were dismantled and the grid work of the spleen, liver and kidneys reconstructed, there was enough chi available to resurrect the cancer therein, allowing Larry a full recovery. This was not a pleasant experience for either of them but demonstrates the nature of the dance of disease and the underlying energetic dynamics for each to better understand.

