Original Masculine and Feminine Blueprint

The original blueprint for the masculine and feminine form was for embodiments that were equal in weight and size. The smaller size of the feminine form is a result of a distortion of the original blueprint and is a reflection of our lack of value of the feminine energy. These new genetic strains, as they are blended with human form, will bring about an equality of size of embodiment, power, and talent between the sexes.

Within the original blueprint, the masculine and feminine forms were designed to experience polarity of talents. They were also designed such that the masculine and feminine would need to learn to work together and share their gifts. The feminine genetically was designed to be the visionary, and in seeing the future, is adept at directing creation. The feminine form was also designed to hold a higher vibration, which is why women are so well suited to the purpose of healing and channeling.

The masculine form was designed to be talented at short range vision. This causes the masculine form to be capable of handling the details and structuring reality. This is why the masculine form is often so talented at researching new data and constructing new technology. These are not absolutes, but the bottom line is that the masculine and feminine were designed to be different, and to pool their differences into a working collaboration of talents.

A good example of how talents can be pooled to work together can be seen within the Sirius Star System. In Sirius, there are both male and female visionaries who have learned to work together. The female visionary sees the long-range picture of the future, and the male visionary sees the short-range vision of the steps necessary to create that future. The two have learned to work hand in hand to bring whatever projects that they are involved with to fruition.

Our current planetary predicaments are a result of the undervaluing of the visionary talents of the feminine and overvaluing the masculine characteristics of structure. It is the undervaluing of the feminine energies that lead to the planetary experience of poverty and hunger. For in undervaluing certain segments of the population, our society justifies allowing some to starve because some individuals are of less worth. It is conversely the overvaluing of the masculine energies that lead to the experience of greed. For in overvaluing another segment of the population, we justify the hoarding of resources because some individuals are worth more.

Our current social problems will be left behind as humanity embodies the new genetics and the original blueprint for the feminine and masculine forms. The new genetics will cause a bringing to balance of the masculine and feminine within, which will bring about the understanding that all humans on Earth are of worth. This will, over time, bring about a balance within the distribution of resources planet wide.

Lastly, the warring of one nation on another is a reflection of the antagonism between men and women in relationship. As men and women learn to live in harmony together, and collaborate talents, so will the nations of our world. Which brings us to our final point surrounding human genetics.

All of the problems on Earth are a result of a distortion of our genetics. It is useless to judge the souls within the human experience because they are only capable of relating to one another in a limited way due to limited genetics, regardless of how brilliant a Master that might be behind the incarnation. As the genetic limitation is lifted, the human experience will return to the state that it was always intended to exist in, one of peace, joy, love, and bounty for all.

What happens when the Masculine and Feminine are separated”

Separating the masculine and feminine had never occurred before this thought and resulted in the tearing apart of the very fabric of creation into a masculine half and a feminine half. This occurred all the way down the dimensions and, in time, resulted in the experience of the separation of the feminine and masculine in physical form.
