

Money movement guidelines for the United Space Forces

The United Space Forces have established guidelines for the movement of funds. These guidelines use the APN model and aim to ensure that all transactions are conducted securely and transparently. To achieve this, the USF has implemented several measures.

Firstly, they do not require investors or corporations to participate in financial transactions related to global challenges such as asteroids, pandemics, and nuclear war. Secondly, Giovanni oversees all decisions to ensure that they are made independently and without any investor involvement.

In addition, all transactions must adhere to the "Jared's formula," which is a set of guidelines designed to ensure fairness and transparency. The USF only allows the use of USD, EUR, JPY or DSM (Stardust) for transactions, and cryptocurrency is not permitted.

The USF is responsible for moving and printing money, and any contracts that involve money or assets must be guaranteed by an independent third party, Kim. Detailed information on the emission and reserve system is still pending approval for declassification.

The DST (dairy cow) and BFR (BlackRock model) will be regarded as providers of the necessary funds for both the operational costs and capitalization of the entire project.
