I met Mona Clayton from The Nurses Pub about 6 years ago at a student nursing association conference. Immediately we hit it off. Mona told me about her book and her personal struggle from being a single mom to being a nurse. Her story is amazing. I was so impressed with Mona and all that she stood for that I began getting involved in her crusade.

Working for Chamberlain University, I had the opportunity to support her events by attending and exhibiting at her seminars and workshops. The events are well attended and organized professionally. Mona is an extremely inspirational speaker who connects students, potential students and experienced nurses with people who can help them achieve their own individual goals. Mona is an invaluable asset in the nursing community. She exudes positivity and can do attitude with everything that she does.

Mona inspires people interested in becoming a nurse with her story. She provides all resources she can to help the right people in nursing. Mona has such an impact, during her workshops, which truly engages and motivates her participants. People attend Mona's workshops because she makes a difference in the world of nursing. I recommend and endorse The Nurses Pub organization and support Mona's ongoing support of her worldwide vision for developing 100,000 future nurses.

Like Mona always says, "Today is a great day... to be great!"
