Housing

- Ohio's New Plywood Ban on Vacant Houses
 - Governor John Kasich, in January, signed into law House Bill 463. As a result, Ohio enacted the nation's first statewide ban on mortgage lenders using plywood to board up vacant structures. Moving forward, lenders will be required to use alternative boarding materials, such as a glass-like polycarbonate that is easier on the eye and does not advertise that a home or building is unoccupied.
- West side gets millions for demolition
 - The city has been awarded about $12.2 Million in Neighborhood Initiative Funds to fight blight and the spread of foreclosures throughout Montgomery County. However, two neighborhoods (Westwood and Edgemont) on Dayton's west side account for nearly half the homes being removed across the city even though they do not have highest vacancy rates. About 66 homes in Dayton have been knocked down or are in the acquisition process to be demolished. About 220 of those properties are in the Westwood neighborhood and 78 are in Edgemont, according to city data. This year, the city expected to demolish 298 properties in Westwood and Edgemont combined, 68 in Burkhardt, 47 in Riverdale, 43 in Twin Towers and 40 in Wolfcreek.

- NAACP will pursue the training of "International Observers" to monitor elections. This will be a "Pilot" program and each of the regions will be encouraged to train three people, resulting in 21 observers that will be selectively deployed in 2018.
- The United Nations Human Rights has expressed concerns shared by the NAACP that the 20 million people on the verge of being denied Health Care by the Trump's administration may be in violation of its treaty.
