OAEMS now has a 2 Twitter accounts working on combing them to eliminate confusion. We have a Linked in account with a technical glitch as well.

By summer we are anticipating the ability to offer virtual seats to the conferences for those who can't be there in person and total virtual conferences when Covid stops in- person ones.

This is your organization, what would you like to see? Let a board member know.

DID YOU KNOW?

The first-time people in the world heard of paramedics was "Johnny and Roy" (Randolph Mantooth and Kevin Tighe) — the lead medics in the Emergency! TV series (NBC, 1972-1977) based on the real-life exploits of the Los Angeles County Fire Dept., which was one of the early pioneers in modern Emergency Medical Services.

SPEAKER SPOTLIGHT

Mathew Dick has been in public service since 1975 when he took what was then called the Trade Industrial training, which is the equivalent of today's 36hr firefighter training. Matt became interested through his father who was a firefighter and Marshall in Centerburg. Later his father became the first chief of EMS for Delaware county when the department was split from the sheriff's office in 1978. Not only was his father involved in public service, but his uncle was also a Deputy Sherriff in Florida, making it part of a "family Business". His older brothers were Deputy Sheriffs, firefighters, and EMT's. To continue the family's legacy of service, one son is a Deputy Sherriff and the other served in the Navy and will be attending the fire academy. He had the pleasure of serving as the first civilian EMT hired for Delaware county EMS serving under his father who was the Chief at the time. After serving on the Delaware city fire department for 11 years and concord Township for 19, he retired from firefighting as a lieutenant. Not finished with being a medic yet, he still works in industrial medicine for the Kroger distribution center and takes time to share his experience and knowledge gathered though the years by teaching EMT's and firefighters. Though his love of teaching is why he has been an instructor for OAEMS conferences, it's spending time with our members that he enjoys the most.
