Hasbro diagnosed her.... I have emails from you discussing and acknowledging this confirmation.... PCOS is present and our 2 doctors also confirmed she has it.

The judge also said get letters... which I have. You are the only one saying no, you are the only preaching risk, you are the only one standing in the way, with 0 support or evidence. That is YOUR choice and it is NOT healthy for Rebecca.

thanks,

If you have proof of all that, please enlighten me. So far all I've seen is your word. She doesn't have PCOS. She's a teenager. I would prefer to keep her safe. It's nothing against you. It's the times with Covid and everything that goes with it.

Katie said she could only say what she said FOR THAT DAY. The school can't condone your actions but they can still require her to quarantine when she returns.

The judge recommended against it not only for Covid but it being the middle of the school year.

I'm sure you only heard what you wanted to hear, but it is what she said.

Take care now

Of course your answer is no, we will address with judge tomorrow, I anticipate she will be allowed since Katie sent her letter directly to the court this time therefore avoiding the stunt you and your attorney pulled last time.

I also am going to object to Rebecca receiving any vaccine, she has MTHFR, Comp-T as well as complications from vitamin deficiencies as well as potential PCOS risks. There are no safety studies that show that she will not have complications similar that presented by the HPV vaccine. You complete ignorance of the genetic complications and risks that this may pose is downright dangerous. One wrong ingredient and you risk her exposure up to 47 different neurological disorders including death. She has not been receiving her vitamin regiment since we moved, that means her imbalance's are still present and until follow up bloodwork is done must, for safety sake, not put her at risk. Especially, since as you know her PCP has stated is not in any covid-19 risk group.

IF you have any proof to the contrary then please show me.

She has also already had it, and therefore immune. This is not about Covid-19, this about you.

If you have anything that says she's at risk, then show me.

I'm sorry you, Ron, your mom and father got sick but this has nothing to do with Rebecca being able to see her family. You KNOW Rebecca has assumed she's coming, you KNOW that she has worked with her teachers to ensure that there is no potential 'distance' learning issues, if it's even AN issue, you KNOW she has busted her ass to get caught up in school. You need to take a step back and realize that you are NOT alienating her from us, you are making her want to be with us more. You are alienating her from yourself or should I remind you of not 1 but 2 inflammatory emails that she sent. Rebecca will KNOW that you had something to do with it and you are doing nothing but permanently damaging your relationship with her. Read both those emails. She repeated several items in the 2nd one. She is forgiving you, but she is not forgetting.

Your also operating in direct contradiction, not once but twice, to Katie's recommendations. I Implore you to shelf your hatred of us and let our daughter come home to us for one week. ONE WEEK.

thanks,

Becca's family in Texas.

While that's good news, I see no reason to go against the Judges recommendation at this time.

The risk not only to Becca's health but mine and my mothers as well as any number of people she may come in contact with after she returns is far too great a risk at this time - or even two weeks from now, which no one can predict if there will be another wave of Covid or not.

Covid is starting to affect the younger generations and the FDA just approved the Pfizer vaccine for kids 12-15 years old. I do plan on getting Becca vaccinated due to the amount of travel she has to look forward to while in your care this summer. I am just waiting for it to be available in RI, which should be before the end of May, which will give her the opportunity to get both shots prior to travelling.

Thanks
Kim

Texas is below 5% and the district has confirmed that as of right now, Becca would not have to quarantine for 14 days upon return.

Thanks
