

PLEASE TELL ME YOU LOVE ME

There you go looking all gooey eyed with butterflies in your stomach every time you see him/her. You hope they feel the same way too. You've been waiting for that moment when you hear them confess how much they truly love you. In fact, you dream about them almost every night, you find yourself scrolling through your phone looking at their pictures.

.....Oh my, you've got it bad Boo, when you're sneaking a peak of their Facebook page or the latest post on their Instagram; hoping that they haven't already hooked up with someone else.

I admit, being in love is an amazing thing, when you know it's love and not lust, but I will address those differences in another blog.

Let's talk about Love, shall we?

Love is a gift from God because God is love. In the Bible it's known as 'Agape Love', unconditional love. The Bible tells us that Love covers a multitude of sin, meaning when you love someone unconditionally, no matter how many times they've done you wrong or said something to you that may have hurt; you find yourself still loving them in spite of it all, even when you don't want to, even when they've left you for someone else.

The Holy Bible describes love as (I Corinthians. 13:4-8)

- ◆Patient and kind
- ◆Does not envy or boast
- ◆Is not arrogant or rude
- ◆Does not insist on its own way
- ◆It is not irritable or resentful
- ◆Does not get happy at doing wrong
- ◆Finds joy in being truthful

There are other places in this wonderful book which give specific about loving someone; and the many ways a man should love a woman and how a woman's desire is toward her mate. This is also something I will share with you on another blog.

► A Desire to be Love

Everyone on this earth has a desire to be love. If anyone tells you differently they're lying. A woman wants to be love, adored, cherished and feel like she belongs and is understood. A man wants to be loved, respected, feel he can trust and have peace.

Even if you've been hurt before or rejected, don't ever give up on love because that would be a mistake. You just may miss the right one still hovering over your hold wounds.

Love has a way of bringing healing to a wounded heart and spirit; especially when it's the right one delivering it to you.

Since these words can be powerful, don't be in a hurry to just sprue them out to anyone and so quickly either. If you do love someone and is truly in love with them, say it and mean it or don't say it at all.

Don't ever force the issue because love always flows easily from the heart and will always supply that which is needed for the heart.

► When you're In love:

When you're in love you will know it, feel it, embrace it. You won't run from it but rather toward it because love draws you closer; rather act as a repellant.

If you find yourself running from the very thing/person you love, eventually the force what you feel deep inside will break you down because love is powerful and cannot and should not be denied. Stop fighting what you know is true.

When you're in love; truly in love, don't be shy to say it to the one or ones you love because most likely they've been waiting to hear it too.

► What Love Does

When love touches you it makes you feel alive, makes you want to live, makes you feel whole again especially where you were once broken; makes you want to give and show it in every way that you can.

Love with all you heart and if you haven't in a while, learn to love again. Even more importantly, if you're not sure about the love you feel, seek God for answers because there is nothing greater than knowing and hearing someone tell you "I Love you".

Be your best always

Amy
