New Illinois State Freight Advisory Council Appointed

Expert Panel Will Advise IDOT, State Agencies on Freight Issues, Policies

SPRINGFIELD – The Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) today announced that 41 members with extensive experience and expertise in the multimodal movement of freight have been chosen to serve on the new Illinois State Freight Advisory Council. The council, representing both the private and public sectors across the various modes of transportation, will advise IDOT on the best policies and practices for improving freight transportation statewide, helping to maintain the state's position as the freight hub of the nation.

"The movement of freight is critical to the state's economy and a key component to developing a transportation system that makes sure Illinois continues to compete in the global marketplace," said Illinois Transportation Secretary Ann L. Schneider. "The members of the Illinois State Freight Advisory Council all come with impressive backgrounds and are certainly up to the task. I look forward to working alongside them and hearing their input as we look to build upon our multimodal vision for transportation in Illinois."

Each year, more than 700 million tons of freight moves in and out of Illinois across multiple modes of transportation.

The new members of the Illinois State Freight Advisory Council include representatives from the shipping and freight industries, agriculture, manufacturing, academia, economic development and local government. The panel of experts, with extensive knowledge of the state's system of highways, waterways, airports and railroads, will advise IDOT and other state agencies on all issues involving freight transportation. An initial focus will be on the Long Range State Transportation Plan, the Freight Mobility Plan and the State Rail Plan.

The council is patterned after the U.S. Department of Transportation's National Freight Advisory Committee, which Secretary Schneider was appointed to chair last year. The council's first meeting will be this spring, at which time a meeting schedule will be determined. The charter members are:
