Another day and yet again another sad “anniversary “. One year ago today, young Hoss lost his life. Another dog under Doggedly’s care who died in boarding without ever getting a fair chance at a real life.

Hoss came to A chance to bloom shortly before the eviction of Dogtown. He was one of many dogs that was loaded on a flatbed trailer and hauled off to the local Conroe shelter in December 2019. Barbara pulled Hoss and the all of other a chance to bloom / Dogtown dogs (with the help of another rescues 501c3 status) from the shelter and assumed responsibility of them under Doggedly dog rescue society right away. Hoss was transported to Katy Dog Suites where he remained until the day he died.

Hoss did get to spend a short amount of time in Barbara’s home (“foster care”) but ultimately spent most of his life as a “rescued dog” in boarding. First Dogtown then KDS.

Hoss wasn’t an old dog and as far as any of us working with Barbara knew, he was healthy, other than being high heartworm positive.

Hoss’s care was never prioritized. He was put on the back burner while Barbara committed to so many new dogs, even ones who required much more costly medical treatments. Hoss was also never networked for a foster so that he could undergo Heartworm treatment. It’s evident by the photos of the full size adult worms that he vomited before dying, that he needed more than just the monthly Heartworm preventative (slow kill) that he was (allegedly) getting.

Hoss is yet ANOTHER dog who fell victim to the narcissistic and fraudulent ways of a bad rescue. It’s hard to not believe that had his health been a priority and he had received the treatment that he needed, that he’d still be alive today.

I had to learn my lesson the hard way and I regret following blindly someone who I thought was going to do the right thing for these dogs. Don’t be like me. Don’t ignore red flags, don’t be complacent. Demand transparency and speak up when you see animals suffering. It’s too late for Hoss but there are many other dogs just like Hoss who still deserve a chance to finally be rescued, to finally find a real home. RIP Hoss 🌈🐾

If you see fraud and do not say fraud, you are a fraud.

Luna had this before. He only had a moderate case of heartworms in December when he did he workup, but since we lost his foster, we didn't do his fast kill and kept him on slow kill. It shouldn't have been an issue, but he had a heart malformation that Dr. Zoo noticed in his xrays. She said it was likely DCM or something like that.

He threw up a couple of worms, which is why I think it was a clot.

What does hoss need? Neuter and Hw?

Seen by Anusface Ash & Brooke

Brooke

Yeah

 His HW's were bad and his heart is enlarged

Other dogs or no? Cats? I can work on a post for him too.

That's right

Brooke

But the vet says it's probably something like DCM

 Hoss is the most annoying dog in the world.

Omfg

Anusface Ash

Omfg 😭

Asshole Ashley

Fuck

Brooke

Poor Hoss. Blame his shitty breeders.

Any idea what happened?

Brooke

Yeah, but I don't feel like talking about right now
