Jacquie Warda, Airshow Performer
WWaa Guest Speaker AND Event Participant

Women pilots ROCK! - But are we still relevant???

In 2003, Jacquie quit a white collar profession and launched her dream as an airshow performer, the first female to enter this business at the age of 50. She flew a Pitts Special many years and moved into an Extra 300 monoplane. With over 3200 hours logged and 1100+ airshows, Jacquie has talent, stamina, discipline, and guts to reach beyond limits. She talks with students, civic and private groups, and loves to encourage women and girls.

"Our real job is to educate others of the vast opportunities in the world of aviation and share our passion and make sure others learn about and experience what we love so much".
