God, what we have is already yours.

So take these gifts, and take us too.

Give us the courage to stop hiding what we can offer, and help us place it in your hands with trust.

Amen.

Bring What You Have

Maybe what is missing is not something more.
Maybe it is the courage to uncover what has been there all along.
The gift we tucked away.
The voice we kept quiet.
The generosity we thought was too small to matter.
The hope we were afraid to trust.
God has never asked us to bring what we do not have.
Only to stop hiding what we do.
And when what is hidden is brought into the light,
something begins to happen.
A gift becomes a blessing.
A small act becomes a beginning.
An open hand becomes part of something larger than itself.
Maybe this is how grace moves through the world:
not by waiting for us to have more,
but by inviting us to bring what we already have into the open.
