To Whom It May Concern,

Archer Academy of Accelerated Learning is currently using the RISE - Compass AI student reflection platform as part of our ongoing efforts to strengthen student well-being and social-emotional learning on campus. Compass was introduced in October 2025 and continues to operate within our student support environment as a Tier 1 SEL reflection tool.

From the outset, safety and guardrails have been central to our implementation. Compass responses are filtered through the Botpress Policy Agent, which applies predefined safety policies before responses are delivered to students. When distress language appears, the system consistently redirects students toward trusted adults and appropriate support resources.

Since its introduction in October 2025, students at Archer Academy have voluntarily initiated more than 280 Compass reflection conversations. These sessions average approximately 10 exchanges per interaction, indicating meaningful engagement rather than superficial use. Analysis of these interactions shows that more than 90% reflect a constructive or growth-oriented emotional tone. Through reviewing data, we believe students most frequently use Compass to work through emotional regulation strategies, peer relationship challenges, academic preparation, and managing stress or overthinking.

Additionally, approximately 43% of conversations reach structured resolution within a single session, suggesting that the platform helps students reflect on challenges and identify practical next steps. In our experience, Compass functions as a structured SEL reflection tool that complements the work of educators and counselors by providing students with an accessible space to pause, think through challenges, and develop constructive coping strategies.

Compass continues to be used as part of Archer Academy's commitment to building a supportive and inclusive student-centered culture.

Please feel free to contact our school if additional information about our experience using Compass would be helpful.
