

DECLARATION OF WAR

DANGEROUS PESTICIDES

We, the harmed, declare dangerous pesticides a threat to human life, public health, animals, and the environment.

We declare the widespread exposure of human beings to dangerous pesticides a humanitarian and public health crisis requiring immediate attention, investigation, accountability, and reform.

Modern pesticides have been described as six thousands times more potent against their “target” organisms than DDT, a harmful chemical substance that was banned in the United States for most uses.

Some of these pesticides have been banned or restricted in other countries, yet remain in use in the United States.

During times of war, it is more important than ever to safeguard ourselves from potential proxies, such as pesticides, which have historically been used as a form of chemical warfare.

Dangerous pesticides are the enemy of our health and the health of our families.

Human life must come first.

This is a declaration of war regarding the use of dangerous pesticides and the exposure of humans and animals.
