

Preservation and Separatism

Union of Saints: Advocacy for Separatism Amid Civil War

At this time, amid civil wars, the Union of Saints advocates for separatism and the right of peoples to pursue political separation, independence, and self determination in America, France, and elsewhere. We support communities seeking to establish their own political, racial, and educational future, particularly where historical conflicts, civil wars, cultural differences, and political grievances have fueled demands for separation.

We believe in the native and heritage right to preserve their futures and culture without force.

Tribes and distinct peoples endure:

Indigenous nations and other communities preserve their identities through their own laws, kinship systems, languages, land relationships, and cultural practices.

Some identities fade while others revive:

Some small communities may lose their languages or distinct traditions through assimilation, displacement, or declining populations. Others may revitalize their heritage, restore languages, and strengthen political or cultural independence. We support the preservation of our heritage, language, race and culture, especially amid modern war, slavery and genocide.

The future will depend heavily on community choices, migration, marriage patterns, political independence, and whether younger generations are taught their ancestral languages and histories.

Story:

The misbehaving students were in seventh and eighth grade. The students were hurting each other and the teachers, so the teachers chose to separate the students based on their behavior. As difficult as this was for the students, the parents and the teachers supported separatism so that the well behaved students and well meaning teachers could continue on without enduring disruption, violence, and chaos.

We also support separatism for adults:

We support separatism for adults as well. Hatred and attacks have become so prominent that we support separatism at this time. We recognize that foreign assimilation, including DEI against White people, has often been coerced or forced under fraudulent pretenses. Unfortunately, our native and heritage people have been attacked relentlessly. We now see who the major players are in these attacks, as many have become openly involved in war.

We want full separatism from left wars, fourth generational wars, and communist civil wars, and we seek safety and peace.

The reasons are plenty.

To List A Few

Political and Cultural Preservation: Issues of Concern

1. Political violence — assaults, threats, arson, and attacks against political opponents.
2. Political intimidation — attempts to silence dissenters through threats, harassment, or coercion.
3. Authoritarian communism — political repression, censorship, forced labor, and persecution under communist regimes.
4. Coercive assimilation — pressure on communities to abandon their languages, heritage, religious traditions, or cultural identities.
5. Discrimination based on race — unfair treatment or exclusion based on racial identity, including when justified as an effort to achieve diversity.
6. Suppression of religious freedom — restrictions on religious expression, institutions, or education.
7. Destruction of cultural heritage — attacks on historic sites, monuments, community institutions, and traditional practices.
8. Violent protest and property destruction — looting, arson, assaults, and damage to public or private property.
9. Political extremism — movements that justify violence, coercion, or the removal of basic civil liberties to advance an ideological agenda.
10. Educational indoctrination — concerns about schools imposing political beliefs rather than encouraging critical thinking, parental involvement, and open debate.
11. Child grooming and sexual exploitation — the deliberate process of building trust or influence to facilitate sexual abuse. Adults who groom children for sexual purposes should be held accountable.
12. Sexual abuse of minors and attempts to excuse it — efforts to minimize, excuse, or conceal sexual abuse of children, including lenient treatment of offenders and institutional coverups.
13. Age inappropriate sexual content in schools — exposing children to explicit sexual material without appropriate safeguards, age suitability, or parental involvement.
14. Conflicts over gender identity and parental rights — disputes over school policies concerning gender identity, parental notification, privacy, and medical care for minors.
15. Concealing sexual misconduct in institutions — failures to investigate credible allegations, report abuse, protect children, or hold offenders accountable, regardless of the institution's political or religious affiliation.

16. Sexualization of children in entertainment and public events — adult themed performances, sexualized marketing, or material presented to children that raises age appropriateness and safeguarding concerns.
17. Protecting powerful people from accountability — political or institutional efforts to conceal sexual abuse, obstruct investigations, or shield offenders from appropriate consequences.
18. Extremist recruitment and political radicalization — efforts by extremist groups to recruit young people into violent movements, encourage hatred, or justify attacks against civilians.
19. Forced mass migration — the displacement or forced relocation of populations through war, political coercion, persecution, or government policies that compel communities to leave their homes, ancestral lands, or established regions.
20. Forced population change — deliberate policies or actions intended to alter the demographic composition of a region through coercive displacement, forced resettlement, or the suppression of a community's ability to remain on its ancestral lands and preserve its cultural identity.

The Union of Saints supports the protection of children, families, cultural heritage, religious freedom, educational independence, and the right of communities to preserve their identities. We oppose political violence, coercion, discrimination, sexual exploitation, institutional abuse, and the suppression of peaceful dissent, regardless of the political ideology or institution involved.

We support preservation.

Due to the wars:

We support preservation through separatism.
