

Spiritual Heritage Homes, Peaceful Retreats and Community Meeting Galleries

The Union of Saints recommends establishment of spiritual cultural heritage homes, peaceful retreats, and community meeting galleries outside of common organized religious tradition. These spaces would preserve cultural heritage, honor ancestral traditions, provide opportunities for education and historical preservation, and create welcoming environments for individuals and families to gather in peace. Through the restoration of historic homes, the development of cultural meeting spaces, and the preservation of regional architecture, customs, and collective memory, these places would help communities maintain their identities and pass their traditions to future generations. They would also provide settings for peaceful gatherings, philosophical discussions, cultural exhibitions, community meetings, mediation, and the exchange of ideas across generations. The goal is to create independent spaces dedicated to heritage, freedom of conscience, mutual respect, peaceful community, and the preservation of the cultural and historical foundations of local communities, without requiring affiliation with a common historical religion.

~Cowardrey