WW3-4 Pipeline

Pipeline

Pipeline

The war begins with transnational criminal organizations and cartels operating across borders. These organizations can develop trafficking routes, financial networks, weapons channels, communications systems, and logistical infrastructure. When criminal organizations expand their influence into specific geographic areas, the issue can develop beyond criminal activity and become a question of territorial control.

Territory can become strategically important because control over geographic areas, border regions, transportation corridors, ports, communities, or other infrastructure can provide access to resources and movement. Where government authority is weakened or contested, criminal organizations, militias, insurgent groups, or other armed organizations may compete for territorial influence. This can create conditions in which organized crime and armed conflict begin to overlap.

The next stage is domestic guerrilla warfare, where an armed group operating within a country uses irregular warfare against a government, military, police force, rival organization, or competing territorial authority. Prolonged domestic conflict can weaken institutions, displace populations, disrupt commerce, and create additional opportunities for criminal networks to operate.

The conflict can then acquire a foreign dimension when outside governments, intelligence organizations, military organizations, criminal networks, or other foreign actors provide money, weapons, training, intelligence, communications, personnel, or logistical support to an armed group. This creates the possibility of foreign-supported guerrilla warfare or proxy warfare, in which a domestic conflict becomes connected to a larger international struggle.

The escalation can be represented as:

Cartels / Transnational Crime

Illicit Money, Weapons, People & Logistics

The Foreign Enemy Pipeline represents the final stage, in which existing criminal, territorial, political, military, or guerrilla networks could potentially be exploited by a foreign adversary. The potential pipeline could involve the movement of money, weapons, personnel, intelligence, technology, propaganda, communications, or other resources through interconnected networks.

This understanding identifies an escalation pathway in which transnational crime, territorial competition, domestic insurgency, foreign-supported guerrilla warfare, proxy conflict, and international confrontation can interact and potentially amplify one another.

This Is Where We Draw the Line – The Anti-American

I am setting boundaries with alternative societies within the United States, such as the communism movement and pro-foreign-enemy movement, pro-mass-migration and genocide movement, and modern warfarists. I am setting boundaries with those perpetuating race wars, against me as a White woman, the war against Whites. I am setting boundaries with those who want to harm American heritage and their culture.

I am setting boundaries with those who target blondes, particularly happy blondes who used to thrive within our society but now face constant degradation, cruelties, and harms. It is rare to see a curly-haired blonde in our society today, and this shows how much our culture has deterred us from honoring White girls and boys, men and women. I am setting boundaries with new cultures who are actively seeking to erase culture, heritage, or religion and spirit from Americans.

I am setting boundaries with foreign parades and harms against American traditions and culture. I am setting boundaries with race activists who harm Whites but remain forever victims who blame Whites, particularly for the wrongs they themselves perpetuate, including war games, assaults, arson, and rape. I am setting boundaries with those who fail to acknowledge modern slavery and those modern enemies who are perpetuating it due to race and politics.

No human should be enslaved, and her assailant released freely into our modern world. This is our great divide. I am expressing this now as a White American who, for her whole life, was conditioned and indoctrinated into believing that my value as a White woman was less than that of others who were of different races and cultures.

I was taught that I could be harmed in any sort of way and that it never mattered, and I was never to talk about it. Whether by man or woman, Black, Brown, or White, I was taught to remain silent. It has become clear to me that the left political arena has committed crimes against humanity in every form imaginable against the American people.

It has become clear that still many men, while proudly speaking for America, remain a hurtful obstacle to women. As the founding member of the Union of Saints, I counter all violent political members of our society who take aim at me. This is where we draw the line.

White Men and Women Have Been Vilified Too Much

White men and women have been vilified too much in our lifetimes, we have been targeted, disparaged, disappeared, taken flight, and assaulted. Whites have been put down and erased from the picture. For many of us, we have endured this racial abuse our whole lives and have never been able to have even so much as a voice on the matter.

This is not just our race. It is who we are, our heritage, our culture, our everything. For these reasons, the intolerable foreign religious and communist movements, and the evil Black, Brown, and Yellow movements that do nothing but target White people within our society, have reached the line. The line is drawn.

The movement should have never stopped being about shared humanity, yet clearly, the picture was lost and was replaced with something far more evil. A violent predator, a rapist, a crime war, a large global war, and now, it is shaping up to be World War 3. You are no friend to us and no friend to me.

You have become our modern enemy. This is the choice you have made. To violently assault me, an American, an American nation, all because of the seething hatred in your heart and your relentless need to change me.

I no longer enable these hateful, spiteful, revengeful cultural changes, for it is clear this was nothing more than modern terrorism, intimidation, coercion and enslavement of our culture, and modern warfare. I hope that more Americans join in and recognize their own value and why this has all been a grand assault. Yet another grand derangement, yet another genocidal movement which has targeted our personhood and culture, attempted to erase our identity and assimilate us and other natives into a harmful and evil foreign culture, this was just another evil foreign war on our people.

I stand proudly today as a White American woman, and I speak this message firmly on the record: the line is drawn against their anti-American war on US.

Our Conclusion

Our conclusion is that our current experience reflects a combination of Fourth Generation Warfare (4GW), Cold War strategic competition, overseas war and influence operations, and other related forms of modern conflict. We also recognize that today's environment has been influenced by decades of geopolitical competition, historical conflicts, policy decisions, technological change, and other events that continue to influence the present.

Understanding both the past and the present helps us better prepare for the challenges of the future.

While the concept of Fourth Generation Warfare is discussed in military and academic literature, scholars and practitioners continue to debate its precise definition, scope, and application.

Update

The Democratic Party has unfortunately become a complex modern war front which stands in opposition to the American people. They have turned to many forms of war as a means to harm the US and our citizens. Americans have endured relentless terrorism attacks and targeting.

While it is important to "have dialogue" in politics, the Democratic Party seeks to normalize looting, or "armed robbery on steroids," as a crime of necessity. They want to abolish our entire national and community security systems. They actively light buildings and people on fire. They want to discriminate the worst of humanity, including slavery, exploitation, terrorism, vandalism as a form of warfare, grooming and harm of children, forced ideology even in schools, including foreign ideology, and other modern forms of warfare.

They have shown that their policies are extremist, and that they are fully aligned with the cartel, gangs, and terrorists. This is a consequence of technology, information warfare, propaganda, but also a corrupted people who are unable to remain grounded in the real world. Beyond harm, they have contributed to warfare against the American people.

For these reasons, and after tireless research and many years of intensive study of modern war and trafficking, we have chosen to fully support and back our national security teams. We are actively fighting for laws and policies that hold all attackers criminally responsible. We are constantly cross referencing our case work with the case work of others and strategizing ways to overcome this diabolical, sadistic, and violent warfront that has become of the modern Democratic Party.

As we have stated in our papers, we used to vote for this party; however, the party today is far removed from the party it was just in 2015.

Today, this party actively seeks to harm the US, replace its citizens, even with dangerous and violent cartel and criminals, normalize homelessness, prostitution, and the war on drugs, fail to follow through in supporting victims, and commit severe acts of fraud, including the theft of the American vote. They seek to exploit taxpayer money in order to support foreigners overseas. They are not just a political party anymore; they are a modern war and slavery front that actively seeks to destroy the American nation, its people, and create something new. They call it "New America."

In other words, it's a modern holocaust. Today, we refer to it as "mass human cost." It never had to be this way, yet this is the path that they chose.

They chose to turn their backs on the American people. They chose treason. They chose war.

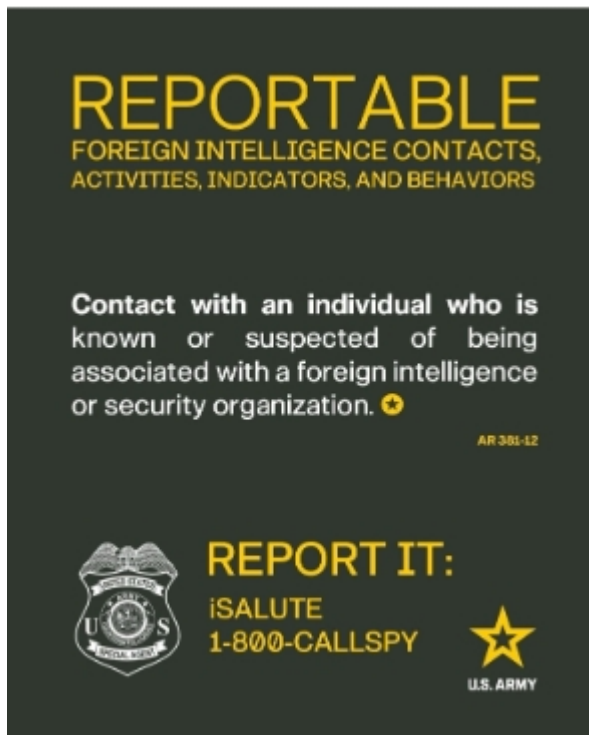

So, as veterans, what do we do?

We serve the American people.

We take our solemn oath to uphold the Constitution.

We hoist the American flag.

And we stand for the nation and the people we were sworn to protect.

DECLARATION OF WAR

DANGEROUS PESTICIDES

We, the harmed, declare dangerous pesticides a threat to human life, public health, animals, and the environment.

We declare the widespread exposure of human beings to dangerous pesticides a humanitarian and public health crisis requiring immediate attention, investigation, accountability, and reform.

Modern pesticides have been described as six thousands times more potent against their “target” organisms than DDT, a harmful chemical substance that was banned in the United States for most uses.

Some of these pesticides have been banned or restricted in other countries, yet remain in use in the United States.

During times of war, it is more important than ever to safeguard ourselves from potential proxies, such as pesticides, which have historically been used as a form of chemical warfare.

Dangerous pesticides are the enemy of our health and the health of our families. Human life must come first.

This is a declaration of war regarding the use of dangerous pesticides and the exposure of humans and animals.

War Time, Intelligence, and Domestic Security

Threat Assessment: 8.2.26

High Threat: Foreign Intelligence

They are no longer just foreign actors but may instead be domestic actors. Concerns include the theft of intellectual property, intelligence gathering, cyberstalking, espionage, and the siphoning of intelligence from homeland security advisers and analysts, with the goal of the continued and deliberate sabotage of U.S. interests.

Individuals acting on behalf of, or providing information to, a foreign government, such as Russia, may be domestic informants or individuals acting on behalf of Russian intelligence.

Highest Current Threat: Domestic “Rights” Organizations Actively Fighting Against Americans’ Rights to Safety, Security, and Free American Only Elections

An active movement is working to repress the American people and undermine their rights to safety, security, and free and fair elections. These organizations may support political agendas, foreign interests, or governing systems that have the capacity to cause severe harm to the American people.

Potential threats include Cold War style political warfare, organized crime, the use of rape as a weapon of war, violent crime, burglary, looting, guerrilla warfare, kidnapping, human trafficking, drug and arms trafficking, smuggling, the early release of individuals convicted of murder or rape, hostile migration strategies, modern colonization, fraud, the purposeful neglect of communities, the creation of modern ghettos, election interference, biological threats, and other forms of political, social, or national destabilization.
