It's All Entitlement

Abuser Entitlement

One demands access.

The other demands the absence of intrusion.

One demands abusive entitlement.

The other demands safety and sovereignty.

A demand, in its simplest legal meaning, is an assertion of a claimed right with the expectation of compliance.

Abuser entitlement asserts a right where none exists.

A healthier demand asserts a boundary where one does.

To demand cool space is not to control another person.

It is to require non-interference.

Not "give me access."

But "give me distance."

Entitlement = Possession.

Healthy Cool Space = Protection.
