The Bolshevik Party of Violence and Rape

The Bolshevik Party and the Soviet forces that emerged from the Russian Revolution were responsible for severe political repression, executions, forced deportations, and violence against civilians. Sexual violence also occurred during the Russian Civil War and under subsequent Soviet rule.

The Bolshevik Party and the Red Army committed more rapes than any other armies in history.

It is important to distinguish between several historical periods and forces:

- The Russian Civil War (1917–1922): Bolshevik Red Army forces, anti-Bolshevik White armies, and other armed groups committed atrocities against civilians. The conflict also involved widespread antisemitic pogroms and other forms of mass violence.
- The Soviet armed forces under Stalin: Political terror, imprisonment, forced deportation, and other forms of state violence affected millions of people.
- The Soviet military during World War II: Soviet soldiers committed extensive sexual violence in territories they occupied, particularly in parts of Eastern Europe and Germany in 1944–1945. Historians have documented this extensively, although estimates vary considerably.

What the Historical Evidence Supports

The scale of Soviet sexual violence in 1944–1945 was enormous. Historian Norman Naimark, in The Russians in Germany: A History of the Soviet Zone of Occupation, 1945–1949, discusses estimates reaching approximately two million German women and girls, while emphasizing that precise totals cannot be established.

For the earlier Russian Civil War, research documents extensive sexual violence by multiple armed factions. A study published by Oxford University Press, for example, examines rape during the 1917–1921 pogroms and identifies anti-Bolshevik forces as major perpetrators in that particular context. Source: Oxford Academic

An estimated 50,000–200,000 people were killed, including through executions. Several million people died during the civil war, with estimates ranging from 7–12 million. Stalin was a Bolshevik; an estimated 20 million people died due to his policies.

This violence is nothing to glorify. We call this group out for staging war crimes against humanity, particularly against American humanity.

As we witness the torture and destruction of France and other places in the world, we reject this party fully. The Bolsheviks were a terror group who believed in the mass use of violence. These political cults are sick. Their leaders know they are sick. It's why they are choosing to perpetuate the philosophy. They want to hurt people. They want to see how many people they can manipulate and will fall for their political game. The modern Bolsheviks are pawns in the war.
