Our Opinion:

"Natural" terrorism progressions are occurring because of exploited U.S. taxpayer funding and the cementing of anti-White sentiment within the Democratic Party. Combined with unchecked crime, historic invasion, the war with Russia overseas, the display of foreign flags, and other related issues, we believe the United States has entered a dangerous and unstable foreign period.

We are also concerned about the targeting of White Americans through degrading or exploitative media and propaganda, including influence campaigns by political actors and foreign interests. We see numerous political movements that are hostile to Western values and institutions. Many Americans simply want to live in peace, but this becomes increasingly difficult when they feel targeted or divided from within.

We find that many of Barbara Boyd's theories parallel many of our own observations regarding political influence networks. Some people refer to these networks as the "deep state." These networks can operate in ways similar to activist movements while also exploiting activists themselves. Many individuals may be vulnerable to manipulation by organizations or actors that hold anti-American views and seek to gain influence or power within the United States.

These dynamics are often driven by envy, revenge, deception, and manipulation. They do not prey solely upon White Americans but exploit the vulnerabilities of Americans from every background. Both men and women may participate in these networks. Unchecked ideological passion can become destructive, resembling a train that continues forward despite the certainty of catastrophe. In extreme cases, individuals may even be willing to sacrifice themselves to achieve political or ideological goals that harm others, consider suicide bombers.

Some participants function as foot soldiers for larger movements operating on American soil. We believe every available option for protecting the American people should be carefully considered. Protecting Americans must remain the nation's highest priority. Individuals or organizations that engage in or support terrorism should be investigated and addressed through the rule of law. Our final opinion, if they are participating in activism-terrorism against the American people, we must let them go.
