

Pesticides – They Are killing Us

Uterine Fibroids

Termidor (a.k.a. Fipronil)

Neonicotinoids

Neo – Niks

Permethrin

PermaSease 4-4

They are killing and genociding our home front with pesticides. As I write this, I am experiencing severe cramps and nerve issues from Termidor. This is experienced from my brand new bed.

With Permethrin, the experience was nerve and heart related. This experience is so severe that I am considering, once again, whether I should take my belongings with me. The experience feels like a chem bomb has been dropped on our homes, essentially making the environment unlivable and cancerous.

I have already discarded much of my clothing because it was causing me to experience cramps. Once again, my skin is toxic to the touch, meaning that if I touch my skin, it burns. The pesticide seeps into my skin and begins causing nerve and heart pain.

I already have eight new black marks and other marks all over my body, including new veins. This experience happened the last time, and I had done my best to go to the doctor and have them examined, as well as get them professionally removed. I will have to go through the motions once again, getting these new pesticide-caused marks examined and removed and getting labs for my thyroid.

The last experience left me without a security deposit and discarding many of my belongings. I had to contact a mediator for assistance and asked my previous landlord for reimbursement of expenses. Now, after months of recovering my energy, working very hard to restore my belongings, and investing heavily in my home, I have once again been exposed.

In Florida, I was told I could not simply say no. I would have to have a physician's note just for me to have autonomy over my home environment. This meant that even after what I had experienced, I was being told that I needed medical documentation simply to say no to pesticides in my home.

This time, even after telling the office I had already experienced toxic exposure, someone opened the door to my backyard, without knocking on my front door first, entered without consent, and began spraying. I did not know who was in my backyard, so I proceeded to lock the door and message management. I was totally unaware that he would be spraying or what he would be doing.

While this is a different pesticide, and he sprayed outside, once again, I have been completely covered in this toxic, nerve-killing spray. I had already communicated my experience with toxic exposure. Still, I had no warning that this spraying was going to occur.

In Florida, they spray the air, they spray the surroundings of the building, and they spray indoors, around the entire perimeter of every apartment, every month. The environment was so toxic that within moments of stepping inside, I felt excruciating pain. The vents were toxic, the water was toxic, and my walls were toxic.

I was staying in the middle of my room just to avoid the walls, which significantly reduced my space. I could not even go outside, as the outdoor air was toxic. My home environment had become a place that I felt I could no longer safely use.

Prior to this experience, the apartment was beautiful. It was just the same as here in Arizona. Everything was fine, and I thought I was safe.

Now, I am in the same place, packing my belongings as fast as I can, but I am afraid I have already been exposed. I really cannot begin to express how disappointed I am in this experience. It is not normal.

They are killing Americans with pesticides. My experience reminded me of the showers endured by the Jews in Germany. The spray was coming from the vents, and I was in so much pain.

The water was toxic, and I kept thinking that the experience reminded me of the showers. I trusted my intuition, and I researched. I discovered that my intuition was right.

Harmful pesticides were used to kill the Jews, and the same company that did this was the same company that had just exposed me as well. This discovery was sincerely disturbing to me after what I had experienced. It made the experience even more difficult to comprehend.

I only learned recently, after an exposure to another harmful pesticide, that this poison is 6,000 times stronger than DDT, a chemical banned in the USA a long time ago. Why is this allowed to be marketed? Why are people being exposed to substances this powerful in and around their homes?

These companies are fighting to silence customers. It is clear that Americans are fighting, and thankfully, the legislation to silence us did not go through, and Americans can still pursue lawsuits. Still, the government is very responsible for this experience, having mandated these pesticides, as are the corporations that push them as a business model.

Their use has increased 25% or more since the early 2000s. They are used regularly as a "luxury spray." Yet the people living in these environments are the ones who experience what happens thereafter. Pain that never goes away.

During World War II, innocent people were told the spray was gift gas. Most people were unaware. It took the tireless work of heroes to warn others.

It was used in secret, yet killed millions, industrial pesticide. Today, it is used out in the open, yet most are completely unaware.

Wishful thinking, they may do their best to pretend their symptoms away. It is normalized, so it must be normal. Yet the symptoms endure.

Women lose their babies. Our community and family members get cancer. People become disabled.

Often, by the time people become sick, it is more difficult to prove. The exposure may have happened long before the illness becomes apparent. People are then left trying to understand what happened to them.

Enough is enough. These pesticides should not be entering our environments at all, and certainly not at the frequency they are being used. They are killing us.
