

In the Air Force, we have a motto: integrity first, service before self, and excellence in all we do. Many people who serve in the military believe in two values: one, serving, and two, protecting. The difference between a person in service vs. a person in protest is an extreme contrast.

Protesters have shown they do not believe in integrity, hence the billions in fraud they have chosen to support, and have not shown service to their country. The opposite is true, they have caused catastrophic and historic harms to their communities and fellow citizens. They do not believe in “excellence,” instead they fail to hold themselves accountable. They choose to protest to the stage of warfare and terrorism rather than to volunteer and serve to make their communities better places for all. They choose the opposite of protection, running on the energy of hate, violence, and destruction, and are willing to hurt all who get in their way, resorting to forms of civil warfare, violence, and assault, particularly against the military and public servants.

The difference between these groups is startling. These are not peaceful protests. No, they are far from it. They are forms of civil warfare. The truth and the facts are ignored, while the lies are glorified and the leaders of these lies are idolized.

It is really too bad, but the energy of evil is what carries these protesters to destroy their own communities, and they are causing unprecedented harms to the places we share. The difference between those aligned with good, service, protection and the truth versus evil, destruction, removing protections, manipulations and harms is clear. These groups are not advocating for any form of evolution, humanity, or positive change, but rather destabilization, harms against the public and public servants, and what they view as “revolutionary war.”

There is a difference between good citizens and protest terrorists. I hope that our defense teams and caseworkers make enough discoveries that the cases can be made plainly. No, it is not just to destroy and go to war on your communities, nor is harming others the way to achieve it.
