

Please excuse US while we go OVER THE TOP

To protect our communities, which we love.

To us, there is no place like home.

There is no place like home because of the communities and friendships that we have built over centuries.

Our families.

1. We are actively detecting all threats in the community.
2. We are hyper-vigilant regarding undocumented immigrants, and domestic travelers, particularly those who seem “estranged” or may be active in foreign or domestic war against U.S. citizens: human smugglers, traffickers, looters, or violent criminals.
3. We are drawing boundaries we haven’t had to draw previously, including finding ways to keep the evil of the world against us out.

As a result of modern war, harm, and cruelty against White Americans, our beautiful, longstanding, and historic communities have suffered gravely from the outside world. As with all progress made within our society, we do not see every step forward as positive, particularly where force and harm have been involved.

We enjoy our culture because it is special and unique to our region and our people. The people within it are very kind and compassionate, and they have been made vulnerable by people who genuinely take us for granted or see us as “excess.”

The war has been made clear.

So we are drawing protective circles around our people now and hope that the world will understand our reasons. Still, we are not asking for permission at this late stage in the war. We heard the sea of voices standing against us simply for being who we are, and realized their message was not only wrong, but it was evil. It lacked the humanity we require to remain a peaceful society.

The beauty of being American is that here we have freedom. The shortfall is that people are actively attempting to steal that freedom and make us become something we are naturally not.

Therefore, our boundaries are drawn, and our commitment to restoring safety, peace and security for our historical and longstanding communities, is our main priority at this time and moving forward into the indefinite future.
