

Empowering Immigrant and BIPOC Communities

About us

Omities Project is a leading nonprofit organization dedicated to empowering the African immigrant and BIPOC community. Based in Farmington, we offer vital services to help individuals and organizations thrive. Our key initiatives focus on technical assistance for small businesses and nonprofits, health equity programs to address social determinants of health, and social care advocacy to support our community's needs.

We believe in providing equal access to resources and opportunities for everyone, and we're committed to closing the economic and healthcare gap that disproportionately affects BIPOC communities. Our mission is to uplift and empower through education, resources, and meaningful support, fostering a more just and equitable society.

Social Care Services

At Omites Project, we believe that social determinants of health shape the distribution of resources at global, national, and local levels. Our Social Care Services program is designed to identify gaps in health equity and advocate for our community.
