

Observations:

1. Increase in “militia-like” groups. “Smoking,” wearing camo, foreign, speaking foreign languages, possibly from China.
2. Increase in undocumented immigrant populations and territorial events.
3. Increase in foreign stalking of Americans, particularly veterans and vehicles with veteran plates.
4. Algorithmic-like changes in demographics.
5. Democratic aiding of foreign militaries. Raiding, or “looting like modern pirates.” Petty theft is not as “detectable”; whatever thievery or intelligence gathering they can get away with.
6. Activism has mutated into a modern war front. No longer just activists, they have moved on to military logistics and targeting Americans. Particularly “field games,” seeking loot, intelligence gathering, as well as territory “spy games,” looking to build territory, particularly interested in harming longstanding White communities. Unfortunately, this is a result of a misunderstanding and “young minds,” as well as weakened immigration policy due to Democratic politics. Propaganda has portrayed foreign enemies as innocent victims and innocent victims as the enemies. No one should be “pointing fingers” or engaging in “military-like targeting” of another unless they are hired by the U.S. government and are trained to do so for a specific job.
7. Local populations are uncomfortable with rapid demographic shifts. Historical communities know the true cost of population genocide, cultural change, and modern conflict threats. The conflict of interest is between humanity, Americans, and immigrant populations, many of whom are longstanding and have built relationships through decades of shared interests. On the other hand, there is forced mass instrumental migration through Democratic politics, which unfortunately also supports adversarial politics and harms the American people, particularly when criminals are allowed to roam freely among streets that have historically been safe. This limits freedom, America’s most important cultural value.
8. Weakens safety, causes emotional strain and discomfort, financial, familial, and policing strain, and creates cultural dissonance.
9. Newly coming foreign cultures and Black and Brown activist cultures have become particularly territorial over historically White communities, not just seeking to infiltrate the community, but also actively targeting them through “mass activist” campaigns, or what we can now just consider war campaigns. As we have seen in many places around the United States, these were not mere infiltrations of culture, but were purposeful and intentional forms of White punishment and revenge, and created decades of crime waves of harm against White communities, all of which was suppressed and omitted from education and history books. The evidence shows this is far from reality, however. A near-total White population loss in some regions signals modern genocide.

10. Targeting of military, police, public servants, and “rewriting” the script of our reality. For example, many Americans are seeing faces they have never seen before and are very nervous because it is not normal for such a drastic cultural shift. We are talking about millions upon millions of foreign faces that Americans have never seen, grown up with, or known. They are simply from another culture, and these cultures are often dissonant toward them as well. The overall experience is uncomfortable and feels like a territorial invasion. It is not a natural transition but a forced one. This is forced cultural assimilation against the will of the American people by left-wing politics, which can now be referred to as fourth-generation warfare.

It is not that all immigrants are the enemy or that friendships cannot be exchanged. It is that rapid, mass, instrumental changes at this level cause immeasurable suffering and harm and constitute crimes against humanity against the American population. Furthermore, when 70% of those undocumented immigrants arrested are criminals, including many violent criminals and child predators, this experience is wreaking havoc on communities and mirrors any war in history, where rape, humiliation, and predatory behaviors began within communities. Often, immigration is a slow progression, and then the population is gradually targeted until a full war or genocide is expressed.

The issue we are facing today is that many Americans are themselves immigrants and have lived in urban places, and so their perception and an actual American’s perception may be very different. Regardless, Americans have a duty to protect their community and culture.

This is an egress!
