Protecting American Taxpayers and Freedom of Conscience

End harmful grant programs that exploit American taxpayers, undermine freedom of conscience, and impose financial burdens on the public without adequate accountability. Government funding programs should not unfairly disadvantage any racial group, including White Americans, or require taxpayers to support organizations or political causes that conflict with their conscience or empower race based or foreign political mobilization against historical American communities.

Modern indentured servitude refers to a situation in which a person is effectively bound to work or provide labor over an extended period to meet a “government obligation,” or satisfy a contractual arrangement, with limited freedom to leave or refuse the work.

Research Objective: Federal Funding and Grocery Cart Equivalents

The purpose of this research is to identify federal taxpayer funding awarded to organizations serving specific racial or ethnic communities and compare those amounts with the cost of providing groceries to American households.

The official source for verifying federal awards is USAspending.gov, which provides federal spending records searchable by recipient and fiscal year.

The following 20 organizations are proposed for examination. The amounts listed below are preliminary examples, not verified totals for the 2019–2025 period.

#	Organization	Federal funding identified	Equivalent at $200 per grocery cart

* The Hispanic Federation figure represents a preliminary federal recipient-profile figure. The UnidosUS figure refers to a specific HUD housing-counseling award. Neither is a verified total for 2019–2025.

 The Chinese for Affirmative Action figure represents a reported $2 million federal grant obligation for a 2024–2027 program addressing anti-Asian hate crimes. The reported outlay was $500,000. The grocery-cart equivalent uses the full obligation.

Policy Principle

American taxpayers deserve transparent government spending, equal treatment under the law, and meaningful accountability for the use of public funds. Grant programs should be evaluated according to their stated purposes, measurable outcomes, legal requirements, and effects on taxpayers. Public funding should not be used to impose unjustified burdens on any racial group or to evade appropriate oversight.

The proposed Freedom of Conscience Act would seek greater transparency, stronger accountability, and fair treatment in government spending while protecting individual liberty and freedom of conscience.
