

I Investigated the City That Made It Illegal to Be Homeless

Source:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rSQ2vH-l3Jw>

Update: Nothing was done about the homeless encampment I reported in Tucson, Arizona.

Despite millions of taxpayer dollars, hundreds of lawsuits, and new laws, the mayor and politicians are refusing to do anything. They ultimately closed the case.

Since I reported the encampment, California has expanded homeless encampments. This experience is not unique to the United States; similar problems exist in Canada and other places as well.

It is very sad. Fentanyl is an awful drug, and I do not agree with the legalization or decriminalization of its trafficking whatsoever.

I am very angry with politicians for their failure to help the public address these issues, taxpayer exploitation, corruption and fraud.

I am very grateful for those who are doing everything they can to solve this issue. I offer the paradigm of Greenlots as a gift to the public and feel that it could be a great opportunity for many cities if they chose to implement its programs.