

OSIRAM and OZIRAH, Victimhood

We are a victim some times, but not a victim all of the time. Human life contains moments of victimhood, hardship and moments of strength and heroism.

A black man got the vote before all women. History holds many layers that must be understood in order to see the full picture of human struggle.

Slavery does not mean we are below others. Slavery speaks to a condition placed upon a person or a people against their will. It means we are being pulled in a direction we do not want to go. This loss of direction disrupts the dignity of the human spirit. Akin to being pulled into a hell realm, down below. This experience reflects the depth of suffering that systems of slavery can create.

Using victimhood as a tool for supremacy is manipulative. That's OSIRAM. OSIRAM represents the force that distorts truth and exploits suffering.

We can apply these concepts to human slavery in a way that REALLY truly deeply makes sense to us and makes the world easier to interpret and not so maddening. Awakening helps humanity understand the forces that shape our history.

OSIRAM vs. OZIRAH. These two names help describe opposing forces within human society. OSIRAM enslaves, pulls down. Whereas OZIRAH frees, uplifts us. These forces influence the direction of human lives. One is heavy and tugs at us. One is light, and anchors us, while also giving us flow and buoyancy. Human beings can feel the difference between oppression and freedom. Non human animals can too.

OSIRAM harms us and is cruel to us. OZIRAH elates us and brings joy to us. These forces shape the direction of societies and the lives within them.

Understanding slavery's goal is to BLUR the lines. Confusion weakens the ability of people to defend themselves. OZIRAH defines the lines. Wisdom of OZIRAH and understanding of OSIRAM restores foundational life principles, virtue and meaning. Boundaries, borders, buoys, do not go zones. These markers protect individuals and communities from harm.

Americans are being called back from war. War leaves deep wounds within the human spirit. Tortured and maimed she and he returns to her or himself, self remembering sovereignty, personal autonomy, soul. The process of returning to the self restores identity and purpose.

There are tiers to human evolving. Human societies develop through stages of learning and struggle. Historically men have been placed first and above in our society. This pattern shaped many social institutions. And historically women have endured great burdens of human slavery, but men have too. Wisdom grows when societies study these histories without competition, and instead with understanding.

We can define these slaveries with books, and even books should have boundaries. Each book a unique subject of learning, to really understand. Books are not to take or steal, but to give, to provide, to learn from. Knowledge allows humanity to study these patterns uniquely and grow in wisdom.

Each person is a victim, but not all of the time. Human dignity includes both vulnerability and strength. And we may be victims of different things, and those harms may be shaped different, but they are still harms. Recognition of harms endured allows space for healing and reformation.

And so we can define those harms without taking from others. Wisdom of OZIRAH prevents the misuse of suffering. And we can also free ourselves without victimization as a power grab for supremacy movements. We can all free ourselves through responsibility and truth.

Removing the pillars of slavery completely is the way forward. Do we really have to dismantle everything? Societies must actively evolve systems that perpetuate exploitation. Let's evolve instead. Changing regulations and reforming policy is the way forward. Laws and institutions shape our daily lives. Let's work with them.

Unionizing can help others free themselves from the legacy of forced labor. Collective positive action can strengthen the protection of labor and human will. Together we can co create new realms of freedom for the American spirit and the global spirit. Human beings have the power to build new systems of freedom.

Through OZIRAH we can achieve great things as OZIRAH is a great teacher. OZIRAH represents guidance toward awakening and balance. OZIRAH awakens both the feminine and masculine traits of free expression without saying one is better than the other. They are equal as god and nature, and through god we are freed. Human beings flourish when their full nature is allowed to develop.

And it is truly through both the masculine and the feminine we are freed. Balance restores harmony within individuals and societies. It is through the leaning of one over the other that our world loses balance. Restoring balance strengthens who we are. US.

These symbols remind humanity of the strong forces that shape our world.

Freedom over slavery, man and woman. Humanity belongs to all people.

Races as an art of preservation, but never as a path of supremacy, subjugation, war, eugenics or enslavement. Cultural preservation enriches humanity while respecting equality.

God as the mover of enlightenment, refinement and reforming. Wisdom and faith guide humanity toward growth.

Slavery and their movers as places of boundaries, borders and books of subjects. Study allows humanity to remember and prevent these harms.

We free ourselves through truth telling, over story telling, through the sciences, through heart and soul, with god as our beacon. Awakening grows through truth and honest inquiry.

We can honor each other without idolism. Respect, humility and the gentle bow of spirit strengthens the bonds of our shared community.

And we can change the paradigm by learning from OSIRAM and looking to OZIRAH. Awakening to these understandings allows humanity to move toward freedom.

We are one through OZIRAH.
