

D. Cowdrey

October 10, 2025

To the Union of Saints,

I am a woman. I am a veteran. I do not believe in extreme politics. I support fiscal conservatism, our military, and healthy government programs.

I am anti-negative propaganda, anti-slavery in all forms, and anti-hate, smear, and violence campaigns. I honor truth, integrity, and logical reason, and I believe in human dignity, autonomy, freedom, and liberation.

I honor my culture, heritage, and spirit. I respect the law and align with legal remedies. I believe in boundaries and borders, and in personal accountability.

I am a moderate conservative.

To me, being a moderate conservative means upholding core principles with balance. It means valuing personal responsibility, strong communities, national security, and practical solutions over rigid ideology. It means rejecting extremism and partisan violence, promoting civil discourse, and applying reason and truth in our daily lives. It means protecting individual rights while safeguarding society, balancing freedom with responsibility, and preserving the stability and dignity of our nation.

Moderate conservatism is not about compromise for the sake of it, it is about wisely applying principles in a way that strengthens the community, preserves justice, and fosters unity. It is about being a steady force in times of division, defending both freedom and social cohesion, and living in alignment with values that honor humanity, law, and moral responsibility.

This is who I am, what I stand for, and the path I choose to walk as a moderate conservative.

With respect and sincerity,

D. Cowdrey

United States Air Force, Honorably Retired

Service Veteran