

Even Down to the Dress

I generously accepted an invitation to participate in a music video. I was told that I would be able to keep the dress I wore while filming. I was not paid, and I generously gave my time. The music video was produced, but the dress was returned rather than given to me, as I had been told it would be.

While kindness and generosity make the world go around, I do feel that valuing women less has made the trajectory and path we are on today very clear.
