

Experiencing War vs. Building Peace Solutions

War is understood through many lenses:

- Experienced directly by citizens, soldiers, and victims.
- Studied by historians, analysts, and scholars.
- Witnessed in real time through media, communities, and daily life.
- Factually analyzed by intelligence, investigators, and courts.
- Collectively understood and confirmed by society as patterns of conflict and aggression.

Peace solutions, in contrast, are carried out through honorable service:

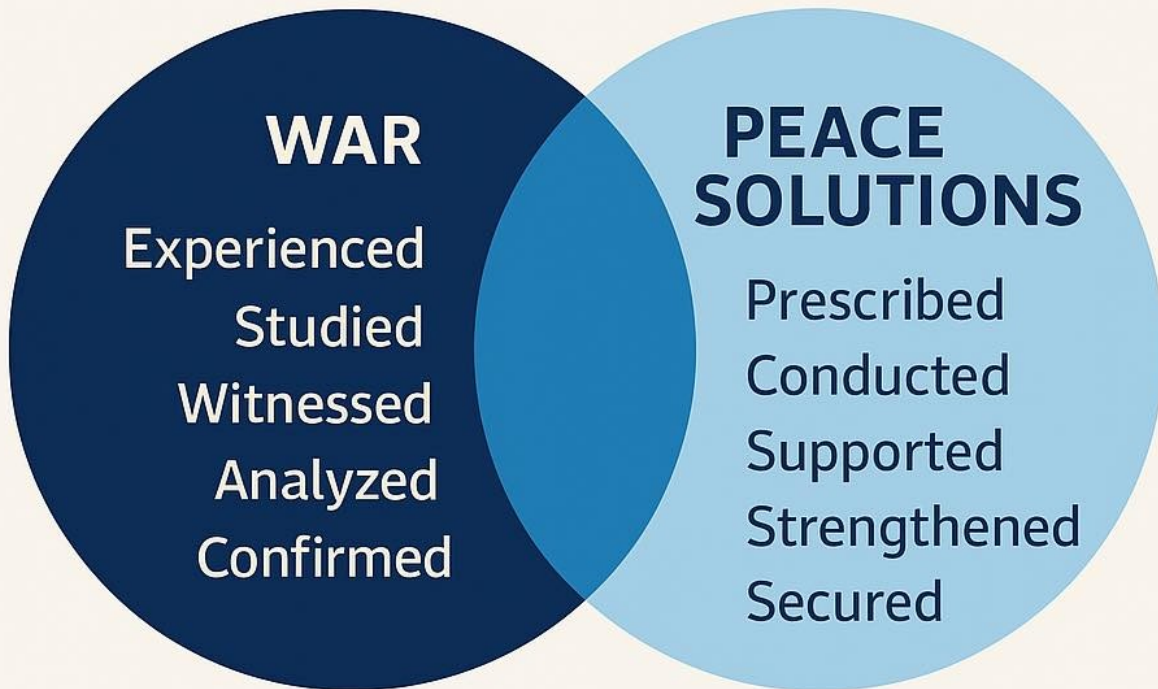

- Prescribed by strategy, law, and diplomacy.
- Conducted by trained agents of defense and justice.
- Supported by diverse national forces — military branches, police, border enforcement, intelligence, and judicial systems.
- Strengthened by unity, moderation, and respect for shared values.
- Secured when government and citizens work together against extremism and foreign threats.

D. Cowdrey

From War to Peace:

Understanding Conflict, Building Security

Supported by honorable service—
military, police, and national defense

www.cowdreyfirm.com