

The Activists Claim That “Kaitlin Bennett Pooped Her Pants at a Party”

This rumor began in 2019, along with the normalization of humiliation tactics, smear campaigns, disturbing forms of human degradation, and “dating dehumanizations,” including the use of revenge filming, blackmail, and other forms of severe human abuse by left-wing activists.

Of course, many of these tactics were also employed by Republicans as well. They are not new; however, they became “mainstream” within the political arena, perpetuating human harms to the point of creating human costs. This is why these tactics are so harmful, because they can lead to “mass harms.” It isn’t just one activist making this false claim; it became a normalized verbal-assault and humiliation tactic used against a woman with an opposing view.

It is a “social harm” and a form of “social immaturity,” often used by younger activists, but it can be used by anyone. Unfortunately, it is a form of psychological warfare, and there really is no excuse for it. Ultimately, it doesn’t actually degrade the person they are attempting to humiliate; it degrades those using the tactic. When used by many people, particularly Americans, it degrades us all. It really shows that we are not evolving, are willing to resort to the lowest of “dirtbag” tactics against others, and is nothing to be proud of. Really, it is sheer stupidity.

Now, I notice that Kaitlin and other activist speakers may be more in OSIRAM when they participate in activism. For example, if someone asks not to be filmed or does not want to talk, coercion may become a problem. Everyone has a will and a right to say no. This is where I and other activists may disagree. I actually do feel that, in public, people reserve the right to say no, regardless of what the current law reflects, as I do believe in personal autonomy.

For example, upskirting in public also became an issue. This is how entitled to filming others people have become. They felt entitled to film anyone, anywhere, and under any circumstances. I do not agree, and I would advocate against this. I do hope that someday the law reflects humanity and human dignity more. I do not feel anyone ever has a right to film or harm others through filming against their will or without their consent.

Both will and consent are two things we, as a society, are really bargaining with right now. People have become incredibly intrusive, volatile, and entitled. I do feel this is an area of our social health and well-being that should absolutely be connected with, built upon and refined.

Our priorities within US may not always be the same as others. Our priority is more reflective of the values of OZIRAH: no abuse, no OSIRAM, respect all life, work to understand and see the bigger picture, honor spirit, God or Goddess, all children and people, be a reflection of peace, of heaven, as above so below, and of God, strong and brave.

We honor our ancestors and our most distant heritage, and the philosophies they passed down. We respect boundaries, borders, safety, and security. We honor a reflective path, a balanced path, and a just path. Ultimately, we have the choice and the freedom, and for this reason, we should be so grateful for this life and all the gifts that we have, to enjoy and to be a more liberated people.

Lastly, we should honor one another, respect one another, and work to never harm others. Instead, we should lift them up, support them, and provide healthy friendship wherever they are and wherever we are on our walk of life.
