Britney accused her dad of controlling her and compared her conservatorship to “sex trafficking.”

Our Findings:

Britney’s case is no different than many other sex trafficking or coercive exploitation cases, the nature of it was clandestine, manipulative, and “realm” controlled (OSIRAM). There were clear financial incentives tied to her labor, image, and continued dependency.

We believe Britney Spears was subjected to both sexual and financial slavery under the guise of protection and management. Her own statements, testimony, and the surrounding details strongly support concerns of coercion, exploitation, and loss of autonomy.

Even some of the people who publicly “advocated” for her later pursued access to her profits, brand, or financial value. That is what modern slavery can look like, controlled dependency, psychological pressure, image management, financial extraction, and clandestine systems operating behind closed doors.
