

In the Making Of – “Racism”

Modern Renaissance Man

I love these commentators because they offer us a more normal perspective in an “abnormal” world.

Here is some truth:

All these movements do is inflame the issues. Instead of helping humanity, connecting people, and building bridges, they create division, fear, and intimidation.

They force others down.

I voted for Obama. I voted for Kamala. I also voted for Biden.

I always voted Democrat.

Today? Because I am afraid, I will not vote for any Black movement leader, and I will not vote for a Left candidate.

Equality never meant harm to White people, crimes against humanity or human slavery.

It never meant replacing the White race with Black and Brown foreign migrants and then portraying Whites as the villains.

Today I am living in fear of immigrants and the Black and Brown communities.

I am living in fear of Left activists.

I am living in fear of Jewish and Islamic activists.

I am living in fear of trans activists and the LGBT movement.

I am living in fear of the animal rights movement.

I am living in fear of the women’s rights movement.

I am living in fear of the foreign movements.

They have gone so far that it has turned into a war.

We are not meeting each other’s humanity, soul or compassion and unfortunately we are far from that place.

You’ve simply pushed our humanity too far down.
