Cowdrey As Witness

In Tucson, there is everyday violence. Gun violence. Knife violence. It is present, and it is affecting the community. I pray for our officers who clear and safeguard crime zones daily. There is also psychological warfare and race based aggression that targets unsuspecting Americans. It is felt in daily life and in the way people move, speak, and interact.

Many Americans support immigrants. That is true. But most Americans do not support individuals who come into our territory and act with hate or racism toward the American people. Most Americans do not support invasion. Most Americans do not support the idea of rewriting territorial agreements. They see this as a betrayal of the nation.

If Americans were fully informed on these issues, they would be deeply concerned. Instead, Democrats and foreigners create messaging that shapes public perception and creates confusion. This results in a false understanding of what is taking place.

At this time, I view the Democratic body as acting in ways that are harmful to the American people and failing in its duty to protect, inform, and uphold the integrity of the nation. I commit to the position that force, fraud, and coercion are crimes against humanity. This includes forcing migrants onto a territory in which the native population has said no. Forcing migrant populations onto native population territory is, as historically defined, an act of warfare, especially when these populations contain individuals who are criminals and commit acts of violence daily.

We remember American communities. We grew up in places where we never felt we had to lock our doors. Today, we are tormented by the idea that foreign traffickers, foreign stalkers, or “foreign guerrilla bushwhackers” may hunt for us, and we are constantly on high alert.
