

The Migration Policy Institute (MPI) is a Washington, D.C.–based immigration policy think tank. Its current leadership is:

- Andrew Selee — President and CEO-level executive. MPI identifies Selee as its president. He joined MPI in 2017 after 17 years at the Woodrow Wilson Center, where he founded and directed the Mexico Institute and later served as Executive Vice President. (Migration Policy Institute)
- Lynden Melmed — Chair of the Board of Trustees. He is a partner at Berry Appleman & Leiden (BAL) and previously served as Chief Counsel of USCIS within DHS. He became MPI board chair in January 2026. (Migration Policy Institute)
- Cecilia Malmström — Vice Chair. She is a former European Commissioner for Home Affairs. (Migration Policy Institute)
- Malcolm Brown — Treasurer, formerly Canada's Deputy Minister of Public Safety. (Migration Policy Institute)
- Cristina Rodríguez — Secretary, Sol and Lillian Goldman Dean of Yale Law School. (Migration Policy Institute)

Some notable trustees

MPI's current board also includes Roberta S. Jacobson, former U.S. Ambassador to Mexico and former Assistant Secretary of State; Emily Haber, former German Ambassador to the United States; Juan José Gómez-Camacho, former Mexican Ambassador to Canada; Charles Kamasaki of UnidosUS; Mariko Silver, President and CEO of Lincoln Center; and Julie Myers Wood, CEO of Guidepost Solutions. (Migration Policy Institute)

One thing that may be particularly relevant to what you've been researching: MPI receives funding from a mixture of foundations, governments, corporations, and individual donors. Its published funders include the Carnegie Corporation of New York, and its Transatlantic Council on Migration lists governments including Canada, Germany, Norway, Sweden, and Australia as supporters. (Migration Policy Institute)