

At this time in history, human rights activists are supporting smuggling and human trafficking. Some, whether aware or unaware, support modern war, slavery, and illicit underground operations. Due to the clandestine nature of activism spheres, this environment offers criminals perfect breeding grounds for criminal operations.

Sadly, there have been many victims since the pandemic as a result of these political movements, and victimization continues. It is no longer about rights, but about fueling genocide and societal harms. While activism itself is necessary to mitigate harms in certain contexts, today it is used to fuel harm and hatred, which ultimately leads to violence.

Bias within these arenas also creates a double down effect of abuses, as rather than holding all criminals accountable, activists fail to see the bigger picture of humanity. The general population remains widely neutral, yet still suffers from violent activism extremism such as arson and other crimes. Crime waves appear across all spheres of activism and include all types of crimes, including trafficking, racketeering, race targeting, and murder.

Worst of all, and most dangerous, these spheres support the harmful goals of foreign enemies such as Russia, its allies, Hamas, and others during very hostile overseas wars such as those in Ukraine and Israel. It has become evident that religion has been used as a cover for many of these operations, particularly within the Jewish faith, but also within others, which serve as diversity friendly organizations, yet underground they harbor foundations for illicit organizations to take form and create new channels for foreign enemies to build their paths of war against the Western world.

These patterns are now easy to see with the right training and understanding, as well as the ability to check personal biases and refrain from any form of racism, which includes racism or preconceived notions about white people. Patterns may be followed by tracing abuse patterns, boundary issues such as filming others against their will, illegal border crossings and national security harms, normal societal standard violations, hate speech and genocidal patterns, and, like with many societal issues, following the money, donor funds, and money spending initiatives.

The objective of the enemy in this case is to dismantle societal protections where possible in order to create more safety for underground criminal operations and enemy operations to flourish. The goal is territory control, enemy and criminal supremacy. One can see how this goal aligns with those of activists and why the two systems parallel. While the state, like any operation, when left unchecked, can undoubtedly participate in grave harms, the same is true of activism spheres.

The Union of Saints agrees with the need for further investigations and the need to combat crime within activism spheres. The Union of Saints calls on activists and parents of activists to neutralize or discontinue activism as investigations continue. Furthermore, the Union of Saints supports the Department of Justice in their efforts to safeguard and protect the American people.
