

Humanity & Separation

Union of Saint's continues the preachings of humanity, as well as the important teachings of our values, of Ozirah vs. Osiram, and therapy as an art of both peace and safety. Wars can be very difficult to navigate, as we say, are as complicated as the heart of the soldier. Though when we are sensitive to the nature of abuse, violence, and conflict, while difficult to process emotionally, the lessons become more manageable to comprehend.

Wars are often caused by a lack of respect for the dignity, safety, autonomy, and protection of others. It is the forcing, the disrespect for personal boundaries, as well as the boundaries of societal cultures and borders. It is the invasion of spirit, of body, as well as community, and society.

As an American, an ethnic American, I feel at this time in history that I am standing before my community as a witness to this forcing and violence. America has been more kind than most with sharing our land; we have offered our territory to many. However, we feel that our culture is now being exploited, and worse, harmed and violated by newcomers.

We see a primary problem with activism and political communities that are pushing too hard. They are, no doubt, in "Osiram" rather than Ozirah. They are pushing, abusing and forcing into the American spirit without consent.

Sadly, and worse, the grand assault of Americans, particularly girls, women, and children, through weaponized rape has occurred. The facts and data do not lie; there is a clear genocide by rape and labor of the American people. All wars are shaped the same; this is no different.

As always, we walk forward with the lesson of humanity. Though, I believe at this time we should safeguard our people and consider what this means for our laws, culture, and our communities. I do not feel that Americans have been left an option but to separate and withdraw from cultures of hate within our borders that seek to disturb and harm the American country and our people.

Cowdrey