

WWII → Today: Expanded Comparative Chart (200 Entries)

WWII-era pattern to WWIII

D. Cowdrey

Contemporary risks, witnessed, and emerging.

WWII → WWIII evolution of:

- Organ & body-part trafficking
- Medical industry negligence & profit-driven care
- Forced medical experimentation & mass vaccination programs
- Industrial pesticides & chemical exposure to civilians
- Population decline & birth-rate collapse
- Race targeting, race wars, and demographic manipulation
- Religious & spiritual conflict escalation
- Slavery, forced labor, debt bondage
- Mass rape, sex slavery, brothels, revenge pornography & sexexploitation
- Ghettoing, targeting, displacement, houselessness
- Propaganda, gaslighting, smear campaigns, blameshifting
- Police & institutional infiltration
- Espionage, cyber sabotage, data warfare
- Foreign flag hoisting & territorial soft-invasion
- Pandemic vs bird-flu containment logic
- Lockdowns, biosecurity, mass control
- Political prisoners & legal exceptionalism
- Communism vs far-right extremism
- Extreme polarization & narrative capture
- Violence against animals, industrialized cruelty, use of animals in war
- Rapid military deployments & endless overseas conflicts

- War attrition, slow violence, and relentless conflict
- Loss of compassion, normalization of harm, erosion of humanity

Domain	WWII (1939–1945)	→	Today / Contemporary Era
Warfare Form	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Front Lines	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Civilian Targeting	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies,	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises,

	visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Population Control	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Medical Ethics	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Propaganda	State propaganda coordinated newspapers, radio, posters, and film to unify morale, demonize enemies, and justify sacrifice. Messaging was centralized and openly wartime. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Influence campaigns can be decentralized and data-driven, spread through social platforms, micro-targeting, and coordinated inauthentic behavior. Competing narratives create confusion, fatigue, and distrust. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Censorship	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Surveillance	Surveillance relied on human intelligence, mail monitoring, informants, and	→	Digital systems enable persistent tracking through devices, platforms, cameras, and

	limited signals interception. Scale was constrained by analog systems. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		databases. The core shift is scale, automation, and the blending of commercial and state collection. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Espionage	Spycraft centered on agents, codes, sabotage teams, and resistance networks, with high personal risk and slower communication. Operations were geographically bounded. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Espionage includes cyber intrusion, supply-chain compromise, disinformation, and financial leverage. Operations can reach across borders instantly and remain plausibly deniable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Foreign Influence	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Forced Labor	Forced labor systems and wartime conscription expanded exploitation; coercion was direct and frequently state-backed. People were treated as war inputs. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Modern coercion can be hidden inside migration routes, informal work, debt traps, and trafficking. Exploitation may be normalized as 'market reality' while remaining profoundly abusive. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Sexual Violence	Sexual violence occurred in occupations, mass violence, and wartime chaos, often underreported and rarely prosecuted. Stigma silenced many survivors. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Technology scales harm: recording, coercion, blackmail, and online distribution can trap victims indefinitely. Trafficking and exploitation can operate alongside mainstream platforms and payment rails. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Human Trafficking	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls.	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow.'

	Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Organ & Body-Part Trafficking	Wartime atrocities included medical crimes and severe abuses in occupied areas. Documentation varies by theater, but war conditions enabled extreme exploitation of bodies. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Concerns today often center on transnational trafficking networks and opaque supply chains. Claims require careful sourcing, yet the risk environment grows where governance is weak and corruption is high. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Starvation	Blockades, scorched-earth tactics, rationing, and occupation policies caused acute hunger, especially in besieged or occupied regions. Relief corridors were fragile or nonexistent. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> </ul>	→	Food insecurity can surge through conflict, price shocks, climate strain, and disrupted logistics. Starvation may appear as 'slow crisis'—visible in communities long before headlines respond. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Ghettoization	Ghettos, forced relocations, internment, and mass displacement were overt tools of control, segregation, and persecution. Paper identity determined movement and survival. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Displacement often follows conflict, cartel violence, economic collapse, or climate pressure. Control can be exercised through camps, documentation barriers, and bureaucratic exclusion. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Political Prisoners	Authoritarian regimes jailed dissidents, minorities, and perceived enemies; legal norms were frequently suspended. War courts and emergency decrees expanded state power. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Concerns arise when emergency measures persist, dissent is criminalized, or institutions lose independence. Polarization can reframe opponents as existential threats rather than fellow citizens. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Police / Institutional Infiltration	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust.

	centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Smear Campaigns	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Gaslighting	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and</li> </ul>

	occupation and direct control		community strain
Race Targeting	Racial ideology and ethnic nationalism fueled exclusion, scapegoating, and mass violence; classification systems were rigid and deadly. Propaganda turned neighbors into targets. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Race and identity conflicts can intensify through demographic anxiety, online mobilization, and political opportunism. Targeting may appear as harassment, unequal enforcement, employment exclusion, or rhetoric that normalizes contempt. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Religious & Spiritual Conflict	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Ideological Extremes	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies,	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises,

	visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Communism / Authoritarianism	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Far-Rightism / Ultranationalism	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Military Deployment	Mass mobilization, conscription, and industrial-scale campaigns defined the era—armies moved visibly and fought for territory. Total war demanded national sacrifice. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Conflict can be continuous but distributed: proxies, special operations, drones, and security partnerships. War can feel distant to some while shaping budgets, rights, and risk everywhere. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Proxy Wars	Mass mobilization, conscription, and industrial-scale campaigns defined the era—armies moved visibly and fought for territory. Total war demanded national sacrifice. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Conflict can be continuous but distributed: proxies, special operations, drones, and security partnerships. War can feel distant to some while shaping budgets, rights, and risk everywhere. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Foreign Flags & Symbolic Claims	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or

	immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Cultural Shifts	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Denial & Optimism Bias	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>

Industrial Chemicals	Industrial chemistry expanded fast; pesticides and solvents were used widely, and wartime production increased exposure risks. Civilian protections were limited and uneven. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Large-scale chemical use continues in agriculture and pest control, with debates over exposure, regulation, and cumulative harm. Public anxiety rises when communities feel sprayed, dismissed, or under-informed. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Industrial Pesticides	Industrial chemistry expanded fast; pesticides and solvents were used widely, and wartime production increased exposure risks. Civilian protections were limited and uneven. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Large-scale chemical use continues in agriculture and pest control, with debates over exposure, regulation, and cumulative harm. Public anxiety rises when communities feel sprayed, dismissed, or under-informed. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Environmental Harm	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls.	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow.'

	Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Violence Against Animals	Animals were used for transport, food supply, testing, and logistics; wartime scarcity drove harsh tradeoffs. Cruelty often went unnoticed amid human catastrophe. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Industrial systems can intensify harm through scale—factory farming, biosecurity culls, and testing regimes. Ethical debates expand as people connect animal welfare to public health and moral culture. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Use of Animals in War	Animals were used for transport, food supply, testing, and logistics; wartime scarcity drove harsh tradeoffs. Cruelty often went unnoticed amid human catastrophe. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Industrial systems can intensify harm through scale—factory farming, biosecurity culls, and testing regimes. Ethical debates expand as people connect animal welfare to public health and moral culture. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and</li> </ul>

			plausible deniability <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Medical Experimentation	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Mass Vaccine Programs	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Pandemics & Biosecurity	Disease outbreaks and shortages were managed with public health measures constrained by war damage and limited antibiotics. Civilians faced crowded	→	Globalized travel, dense cities, and real-time media amplify both transmission and panic. Containment tools can include mandates, travel

	shelters and disrupted sanitation. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		controls, and emergency powers —raising public health and civil-liberty tensions. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Containment & Quarantine	Disease outbreaks and shortages were managed with public health measures constrained by war damage and limited antibiotics. Civilians faced crowded shelters and disrupted sanitation. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Globalized travel, dense cities, and real-time media amplify both transmission and panic. Containment tools can include mandates, travel controls, and emergency powers —raising public health and civil-liberty tensions. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Lockdowns & Movement Restrictions	Disease outbreaks and shortages were managed with public health measures constrained by war damage and limited antibiotics. Civilians faced crowded shelters and disrupted sanitation. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> </ul>	→	Globalized travel, dense cities, and real-time media amplify both transmission and panic. Containment tools can include mandates, travel controls, and emergency powers —raising public health and civil-liberty tensions. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		pressure (digital, economic, social) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Population Decline	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Birth Rate Decline	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Mass Migration	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing,	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and

	conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Refugees & Displacement	Ghettos, forced relocations, internment, and mass displacement were overt tools of control, segregation, and persecution. Paper identity determined movement and survival. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Displacement often follows conflict, cartel violence, economic collapse, or climate pressure. Control can be exercised through camps, documentation barriers, and bureaucratic exclusion. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Border Strain	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and</li> </ul>

	and rationing <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		plausible deniability <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Housing Crisis	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Houselessness	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Mass Prostitution	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls.	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,'

	Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Sex Slavery / Brothels	Forced labor systems and wartime conscription expanded exploitation; coercion was direct and frequently state-backed. People were treated as war inputs. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Modern coercion can be hidden inside migration routes, informal work, debt traps, and trafficking. Exploitation may be normalized as 'market reality' while remaining profoundly abusive. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Revenge Pornography & Sexploitation	Sexual violence occurred in occupations, mass violence, and wartime chaos, often underreported and rarely prosecuted. Stigma silenced many survivors. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Technology scales harm: recording, coercion, blackmail, and online distribution can trap victims indefinitely. Trafficking and exploitation can operate alongside mainstream platforms and payment rails. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> </ul>

			<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Digital Warfare	Sabotage targeted rail, factories, bridges, and communications—often by physical raids or resistance actions. Damage was visible and local. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Cyber sabotage can disrupt hospitals, utilities, payment systems, and information integrity remotely. The harm may be delayed, ambiguous, or blamed on 'technical issues.' Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Cyber Sabotage	Sabotage targeted rail, factories, bridges, and communications—often by physical raids or resistance actions. Damage was visible and local. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Cyber sabotage can disrupt hospitals, utilities, payment systems, and information integrity remotely. The harm may be delayed, ambiguous, or blamed on 'technical issues.' Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Infrastructure Attacks	Sabotage targeted rail, factories, bridges, and communications—often by physical raids or resistance actions. Damage was visible and local. Key features:	→	Cyber sabotage can disrupt hospitals, utilities, payment systems, and information integrity remotely. The harm may be delayed, ambiguous, or blamed on 'technical issues.'

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Economic Warfare	Economic warfare relied on blockades, rationing, strategic bombing of industry, and resource capture. Supply chains were national and vulnerable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Sanctions, financial restrictions, supply-chain chokepoints, and corporate leverage can pressure societies without declaring war. Everyday life becomes a battlefield of prices, shortages, and access. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Sanctions	Economic warfare relied on blockades, rationing, strategic bombing of industry, and resource capture. Supply chains were national and vulnerable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Sanctions, financial restrictions, supply-chain chokepoints, and corporate leverage can pressure societies without declaring war. Everyday life becomes a battlefield of prices, shortages, and access. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Resource Control		→

	Economic warfare relied on blockades, rationing, strategic bombing of industry, and resource capture. Supply chains were national and vulnerable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Sanctions, financial restrictions, supply-chain chokepoints, and corporate leverage can pressure societies without declaring war. Everyday life becomes a battlefield of prices, shortages, and access. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Food Supply Disruption	Blockades, scorched-earth tactics, rationing, and occupation policies caused acute hunger, especially in besieged or occupied regions. Relief corridors were fragile or nonexistent. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Food insecurity can surge through conflict, price shocks, climate strain, and disrupted logistics. Starvation may appear as 'slow crisis'—visible in communities long before headlines respond. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Water Control	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology.

	measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Energy Control	Economic warfare relied on blockades, rationing, strategic bombing of industry, and resource capture. Supply chains were national and vulnerable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Sanctions, financial restrictions, supply-chain chokepoints, and corporate leverage can pressure societies without declaring war. Everyday life becomes a battlefield of prices, shortages, and access. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Psychological Warfare	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Fear Campaigns		→

	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Normalization of Violence	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Hate Speech	Racial ideology and ethnic nationalism fueled exclusion, scapegoating, and mass violence; classification systems were rigid and deadly. Propaganda turned neighbors into targets.	→	Race and identity conflicts can intensify through demographic anxiety, online mobilization, and political opportunism. Targeting may appear as harassment, unequal

	Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		enforcement, employment exclusion, or rhetoric that normalizes contempt. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Discrimination	Racial ideology and ethnic nationalism fueled exclusion, scapegoating, and mass violence; classification systems were rigid and deadly. Propaganda turned neighbors into targets. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Race and identity conflicts can intensify through demographic anxiety, online mobilization, and political opportunism. Targeting may appear as harassment, unequal enforcement, employment exclusion, or rhetoric that normalizes contempt. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Dehumanization	Racial ideology and ethnic nationalism fueled exclusion, scapegoating, and mass violence; classification systems were rigid and deadly. Propaganda turned neighbors into targets.	→	Race and identity conflicts can intensify through demographic anxiety, online mobilization, and political opportunism. Targeting may appear as harassment, unequal

	Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		enforcement, employment exclusion, or rhetoric that normalizes contempt. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Loss of Compassion	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
War Attrition	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and</li> </ul>

	occupation and direct control		community strain
Relentless Conflict	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Endless War Framing	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Youth Radicalization	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through

	physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Education Manipulation	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Media Capture	State propaganda coordinated newspapers, radio, posters, and film to unify morale, demonize enemies, and justify sacrifice. Messaging was centralized and openly wartime. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Influence campaigns can be decentralized and data-driven, spread through social platforms, micro-targeting, and coordinated inauthentic behavior. Competing narratives create confusion, fatigue, and distrust. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>

Narrative Control	State propaganda coordinated newspapers, radio, posters, and film to unify morale, demonize enemies, and justify sacrifice. Messaging was centralized and openly wartime. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Influence campaigns can be decentralized and data-driven, spread through social platforms, micro-targeting, and coordinated inauthentic behavior. Competing narratives create confusion, fatigue, and distrust. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Algorithmic Targeting	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Social Fragmentation	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology.

	measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Community Breakdown	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Family Separation	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Child Exploitation	WWII pressures	→	Today's pressures

	were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Identity Erasure	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Cultural Erasure	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features:	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		pressure (digital, economic, social) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Language Suppression	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Historical Revisionism	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Monuments & Symbols	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts,	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict,

	rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Territorial Claims	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Covert Operations	Spycraft centered on agents, codes, sabotage teams, and resistance networks, with high personal risk and slower communication. Operations were geographically bounded. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion</li> </ul>	→	Espionage includes cyber intrusion, supply-chain compromise, disinformation, and financial leverage. Operations can reach across borders instantly and remain plausibly deniable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> </ul>

	and rationing <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Blackmail	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Extortion	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Surveillance States	Surveillance relied on human intelligence, mail monitoring, informants, and limited signals interception. Scale	→	Digital systems enable persistent tracking through devices, platforms, cameras, and databases. The core shift is scale,

	was constrained by analog systems. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		automation, and the blending of commercial and state collection. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Data Harvesting	Surveillance relied on human intelligence, mail monitoring, informants, and limited signals interception. Scale was constrained by analog systems. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Digital systems enable persistent tracking through devices, platforms, cameras, and databases. The core shift is scale, automation, and the blending of commercial and state collection. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Biological Threats	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>

	direct control
Lab Leak Fears & Trust Collapse	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Weaponized Illness Claims	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Healthcare Negligence	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through

	measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Insurance Denial	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Profit-Driven Medicine	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Disability Neglect	WWII pressures	→	Today's pressures

	were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Veteran Neglect	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Psych Trauma	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features:	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		pressure (digital, economic, social) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Shell Shock / PTSD	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Mental Health Crisis	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Suicide Rates	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts,	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict,

	rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Addiction	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Drug Trafficking	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and</li> </ul>

	and rationing <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		plausible deniability <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Arms Trafficking	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Mercenaries	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Private Militias	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls.	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,'

	Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Corporate Militarization	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Colonial Dynamics	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>

	direct control
Neo-Colonialism	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Economic Slavery	Forced labor systems and wartime conscription expanded exploitation; coercion was direct and frequently state-backed. People were treated as war inputs. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Modern coercion can be hidden inside migration routes, informal work, debt traps, and trafficking. Exploitation may be normalized as 'market reality' while remaining profoundly abusive. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Debt Bondage	Forced labor systems and wartime conscription expanded exploitation; coercion was direct and frequently state-backed. People were treated as war inputs.	→	Modern coercion can be hidden inside migration routes, informal work, debt traps, and trafficking. Exploitation may be normalized as 'market reality' while remaining

	Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		profoundly abusive. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Wage Suppression	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Labor Exploitation	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Gig Economy Control	WWII pressures	→	Today's pressures

	were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Automation Displacement	Ghettos, forced relocations, internment, and mass displacement were overt tools of control, segregation, and persecution. Paper identity determined movement and survival. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Displacement often follows conflict, cartel violence, economic collapse, or climate pressure. Control can be exercised through camps, documentation barriers, and bureaucratic exclusion. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
AI Warfare	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable.	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features:

	Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Autonomous Weapons	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Drone Warfare	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Remote Killing	WWII pressures were typically overt:	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse:

	declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Moral Distance	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Civil Liberties Erosion	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital,</li> </ul>

	conditions <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		economic, social) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Emergency Powers	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Martial Law Anxiety	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Legal Exceptionalism	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing,	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and

	conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Courts Undermined	Authoritarian regimes jailed dissidents, minorities, and perceived enemies; legal norms were frequently suspended. War courts and emergency decrees expanded state power. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Concerns arise when emergency measures persist, dissent is criminalized, or institutions lose independence. Polarization can reframe opponents as existential threats rather than fellow citizens. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Rule of Law Erosion	Authoritarian regimes jailed dissidents, minorities, and perceived enemies; legal norms were frequently suspended. War courts and emergency decrees expanded state power. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> </ul>	→	Concerns arise when emergency measures persist, dissent is criminalized, or institutions lose independence. Polarization can reframe opponents as existential threats rather than fellow citizens. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital,</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		economic, social) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Impunity	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Whistleblower Targeting	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Journalist Silencing	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust.

	centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Exile	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Asylum Denial	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and</li> </ul>

	occupation and direct control		community strain
Statelessness	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Humanitarian Aid Weaponized	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Aid Blockades	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through

	physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Relief Denial	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Selective Compassion	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Hierarchy of Worth		→

	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Disposable Populations	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Normalization of Death	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable.	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features:

	Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Mass Graves	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Hidden Death Counts	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Statistical Obfuscation	WWII pressures were typically overt:	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse:

	declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Bureaucratic Violence	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Paperwork Harm	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital,</li> </ul>

	conditions <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		economic, social) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Delay as Weapon	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Neglect as Policy	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Slow Violence	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing,	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and

	conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Everyday Harm	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Invisible War	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Total War → Total Control	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Warfare Form (Aspect 2)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Front Lines (Aspect 3)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or

	immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Civilian Targeting (Aspect 4)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Population Control (Aspect 5)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>

Medical Ethics (Aspect 6)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Propaganda (Aspect 7)	State propaganda coordinated newspapers, radio, posters, and film to unify morale, demonize enemies, and justify sacrifice. Messaging was centralized and openly wartime. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Influence campaigns can be decentralized and data-driven, spread through social platforms, micro-targeting, and coordinated inauthentic behavior. Competing narratives create confusion, fatigue, and distrust. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Censorship (Aspect 8)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology.

	measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Surveillance (Aspect 9)	Surveillance relied on human intelligence, mail monitoring, informants, and limited signals interception. Scale was constrained by analog systems. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Digital systems enable persistent tracking through devices, platforms, cameras, and databases. The core shift is scale, automation, and the blending of commercial and state collection. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Espionage (Aspect 10)	Spycraft centered on agents, codes, sabotage teams, and resistance networks, with high personal risk and slower communication. Operations were geographically bounded. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Espionage includes cyber intrusion, supply-chain compromise, disinformation, and financial leverage. Operations can reach across borders instantly and remain plausibly deniable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Foreign Influence (Aspect 11)	WWII pressures	→	Today's pressures

	were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Forced Labor (Aspect 12)	Forced labor systems and wartime conscription expanded exploitation; coercion was direct and frequently state-backed. People were treated as war inputs. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Modern coercion can be hidden inside migration routes, informal work, debt traps, and trafficking. Exploitation may be normalized as 'market reality' while remaining profoundly abusive. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Sexual Violence (Aspect 13)	Sexual violence occurred in occupations, mass violence, and wartime chaos, often underreported and rarely prosecuted. Stigma silenced many survivors. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> </ul>	→	Technology scales harm: recording, coercion, blackmail, and online distribution can trap victims indefinitely. Trafficking and exploitation can operate alongside mainstream platforms and payment rails.

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Human Trafficking (Aspect 14)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Organ & Body-Part Trafficking (Aspect 15)	Wartime atrocities included medical crimes and severe abuses in occupied areas. Documentation varies by theater, but war conditions enabled extreme exploitation of bodies. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Concerns today often center on transnational trafficking networks and opaque supply chains. Claims require careful sourcing, yet the risk environment grows where governance is weak and corruption is high. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Starvation (Aspect 16)	Blockades,	→	Food insecurity can

	scorched-earth tactics, rationing, and occupation policies caused acute hunger, especially in besieged or occupied regions. Relief corridors were fragile or nonexistent. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		surge through conflict, price shocks, climate strain, and disrupted logistics. Starvation may appear as 'slow crisis'—visible in communities long before headlines respond. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Ghettoization (Aspect 17)	Ghettos, forced relocations, internment, and mass displacement were overt tools of control, segregation, and persecution. Paper identity determined movement and survival. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Displacement often follows conflict, cartel violence, economic collapse, or climate pressure. Control can be exercised through camps, documentation barriers, and bureaucratic exclusion. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Political Prisoners (Aspect 18)	Authoritarian regimes jailed dissidents, minorities, and perceived enemies; legal norms were frequently suspended. War courts and emergency decrees expanded state	→	Concerns arise when emergency measures persist, dissent is criminalized, or institutions lose independence. Polarization can reframe opponents as existential threats rather than fellow

	power. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		citizens. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Police / Institutional Infiltration (Aspect 19)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Smear Campaigns (Aspect 20)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Gaslighting (Aspect 21)	WWII pressures	→	Today's pressures

	were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Race Targeting (Aspect 22)	Racial ideology and ethnic nationalism fueled exclusion, scapegoating, and mass violence; classification systems were rigid and deadly. Propaganda turned neighbors into targets. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Race and identity conflicts can intensify through demographic anxiety, online mobilization, and political opportunism. Targeting may appear as harassment, unequal enforcement, employment exclusion, or rhetoric that normalizes contempt. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Religious & Spiritual Conflict (Aspect 23)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls.	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,'

	Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Ideological Extremes (Aspect 24)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Communism / Authoritarianism (Aspect 25)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>

	direct control
Far-Rightism / Ultranationalism (Aspect 26)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Military Deployment (Aspect 27)	Mass mobilization, conscription, and industrial-scale campaigns defined the era—armies moved visibly and fought for territory. Total war demanded national sacrifice. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Conflict can be continuous but distributed: proxies, special operations, drones, and security partnerships. War can feel distant to some while shaping budgets, rights, and risk everywhere. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Proxy Wars (Aspect 28)	Mass mobilization, conscription, and industrial-scale campaigns defined the era—armies moved visibly and fought for territory. Total war demanded national sacrifice. Key features:	→	Conflict can be continuous but distributed: proxies, special operations, drones, and security partnerships. War can feel distant to some while shaping budgets, rights, and risk everywhere.

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Foreign Flags & Symbolic Claims (Aspect 29)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Cultural Shifts (Aspect 30)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Denial & Optimism Bias (Aspect 31)	WWII pressures were typically overt:	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse:

	declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Industrial Chemicals (Aspect 32)	Industrial chemistry expanded fast; pesticides and solvents were used widely, and wartime production increased exposure risks. Civilian protections were limited and uneven. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Large-scale chemical use continues in agriculture and pest control, with debates over exposure, regulation, and cumulative harm. Public anxiety rises when communities feel sprayed, dismissed, or under-informed. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Industrial Pesticides (Aspect 33)	Industrial chemistry expanded fast; pesticides and solvents were used widely, and wartime production increased exposure risks. Civilian protections were limited and uneven. Key features:	→	Large-scale chemical use continues in agriculture and pest control, with debates over exposure, regulation, and cumulative harm. Public anxiety rises when communities feel sprayed, dismissed, or under-

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		informed. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Environmental Harm (Aspect 34)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Violence Against Animals (Aspect 35)	Animals were used for transport, food supply, testing, and logistics; wartime scarcity drove harsh tradeoffs. Cruelty often went unnoticed amid human catastrophe. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Industrial systems can intensify harm through scale—factory farming, biosecurity culls, and testing regimes. Ethical debates expand as people connect animal welfare to public health and moral culture. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Use of Animals in		→

War (Aspect 36)	Animals were used for transport, food supply, testing, and logistics; wartime scarcity drove harsh tradeoffs. Cruelty often went unnoticed amid human catastrophe. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Industrial systems can intensify harm through scale—factory farming, biosecurity culls, and testing regimes. Ethical debates expand as people connect animal welfare to public health and moral culture. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Medical Experimentation (Aspect 37)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Mass Vaccine Programs (Aspect 38)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable.	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology.

	Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Pandemics & Biosecurity (Aspect 39)	Disease outbreaks and shortages were managed with public health measures constrained by war damage and limited antibiotics. Civilians faced crowded shelters and disrupted sanitation. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Globalized travel, dense cities, and real-time media amplify both transmission and panic. Containment tools can include mandates, travel controls, and emergency powers —raising public health and civil-liberty tensions. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Containment & Quarantine (Aspect 40)	Disease outbreaks and shortages were managed with public health measures constrained by war damage and limited antibiotics. Civilians faced crowded shelters and disrupted sanitation. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Globalized travel, dense cities, and real-time media amplify both transmission and panic. Containment tools can include mandates, travel controls, and emergency powers —raising public health and civil-liberty tensions. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and</li> </ul>

			community strain
Lockdowns & Movement Restrictions (Aspect 41)	Disease outbreaks and shortages were managed with public health measures constrained by war damage and limited antibiotics. Civilians faced crowded shelters and disrupted sanitation. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Globalized travel, dense cities, and real-time media amplify both transmission and panic. Containment tools can include mandates, travel controls, and emergency powers —raising public health and civil-liberty tensions. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Population Decline (Aspect 42)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Birth Rate Decline (Aspect 43)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or

	immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Mass Migration (Aspect 44)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Refugees & Displacement (Aspect 45)	Ghettos, forced relocations, internment, and mass displacement were overt tools of control, segregation, and persecution. Paper identity determined movement and survival. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Displacement often follows conflict, cartel violence, economic collapse, or climate pressure. Control can be exercised through camps, documentation barriers, and bureaucratic exclusion. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and</li> </ul>

			community strain
Border Strain (Aspect 46)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Housing Crisis (Aspect 47)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Houselessness (Aspect 48)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through

	measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Mass Prostitution (Aspect 49)	WWII pressures were typically overt: declared enemies, visible fronts, rationing, conscription, and centralized controls. Harm was often immediate and physically measurable. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Today's pressures can be diffuse: overlapping crises, information conflict, economic strain, and institutional distrust. Harm can be 'slow,' bureaucratic, or mediated through technology. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Sex Slavery / Brothels (Aspect 50)	Forced labor systems and wartime conscription expanded exploitation; coercion was direct and frequently state-backed. People were treated as war inputs. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>	→	Modern coercion can be hidden inside migration routes, informal work, debt traps, and trafficking. Exploitation may be normalized as 'market reality' while remaining profoundly abusive. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
Revenge Pornography &	Sexual violence	→	Technology scales

Sexploitation (Aspect 51)	occurred in occupations, mass violence, and wartime chaos, often underreported and rarely prosecuted. Stigma silenced many survivors. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• State-declared war conditions</li> <li>• Visible coercion and rationing</li> <li>• Physical occupation and direct control</li> </ul>		harm: recording, coercion, blackmail, and online distribution can trap victims indefinitely. Trafficking and exploitation can operate alongside mainstream platforms and payment rails. Key features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Multi-domain pressure (digital, economic, social)</li> <li>• Ambiguity and plausible deniability</li> <li>• Institutional and community strain</li> </ul>
------------------------------	---	--	--