Claims:

"Their life's work."

"I really hope that we're going through a focused, phased review of how funding is distributed." Urnov said.

"In recent years, Americans have lost confidence in our increasingly politicized healthcare and research apparatus that has been obsessed with DEI and COVID, which the majority of Americans moved on from years ago," Kush Desai, a spokesman for the White House, said in a statement.

"Moved on from years ago."

Summary

Some of us did not simply "move on." We have continued researching these issues on our own, without compensation, because we care. We were right about the pandemic. We knew we were right because we stood on the side of truth. We were abused the entire time by those who invaded our privacy, autonomy, and our right to say no to invasive medicine. They profited, a lot. People died. We saw their caskets buried in a row. They profited from their organs. They told us to just "move on." But we did not just move on, because we care about our home and our people. This is not about DEI. It is about American safety, public health, responsible oversight of medical research, and ensuring that taxpayer funding is not exploited like our bodies were.
