Facts

The Black Power movement emerged in the 1960s.

Malcolm X, Martin Luther King Jr., the Black Panther Party, Black Nationalism, Socialism, Black-owned stores, Black studies, Black only colleges, food cooperatives, the Black Liberation Army, the Nation of Islam, and Students for a Democratic Society were associated with various political, social, and community movements of the era.*

As a counter-movement, the White Power movement also emerged in the 1960s.

They even formed a White Panther Party.

Blacks and Whites were both targeted, specifically leaders of political movements, as well as police officers and others.

Unfortunately, the race wars continued, but sadly, it seems they have taken a turn for the worse in recent years, as we have witnessed historic, catastrophic, and Holocaust-level violence, as well as successive crime waves associated with Black, Hispanic, Jewish, and Muslim/Islamic movements. This is the pyramid that has dominated violence and crime within our country and, unfortunately, often comes with the targeting of White Americans.

The left and liberal arts programs have portrayed Whites as the forever enemy, while never sharing the whole picture or allowing room for accountability. Unfortunately, because only one side of the story has been shared, we have a country that believes it is justified in hating and hurting innocent and vulnerable White Americans.

Let the truth be known.
