

Concerns Regarding Foreigner Representation, Terrorism, Instrumental Mass Migration, and Foreign Extremist Anti-State Coalitions in Maine

Maine needs strong representation from Mainers who understand the needs, history, and communities of the state. Public policy should prioritize the safety, well-being, and Native demographic voice of Maine residents, not those supported by hundreds of foreigner-supporting lobbies.

Hispanic and foreign coalitions raise concerns about outside advocacy groups that do not properly represent the interests of Maine's local communities and public servants. While immigrant rights and public safety are important issues, advocacy efforts should not undermine trust in local institutions or place unfair pressure on Maine public servants.

These coalitions directly interfere with necessary state action to protect Maine, Vermont, and New Hampshire residents. Mainers are sick and tired of newcomers and foreigners advocating on their behalf. Who are you? If you are not a Maine native, this is how we really feel: Go to your home country and preach there. Sorry, but we are in the middle of combating human slavery and guerrilla war, much of it perpetuated by the criminal succession of the people these extremist coalitions have been vehemently advocating for.

We, on the other hand, support the American people, their safety, their heritage, their culture, and their families. Foreigners are taking too much from Americans, and this is very clear across the country. Which is why we say, if you are advocating against Mainer safety, keep out.

Any movement operating in Maine that is not from Maine should be dismantled. Maine residents deserve representation that reflects their own experiences and protects the public interest, not the interests of out-of-staters and foreigners who are only concerned with political power and their own foreign cultures. They are actively advocating for something Mainers do not want: cultural change. Mainers have seen enough. We say to you, foreigner coalition: Advocate for your home country, not for the state of Maine.
