

Union of Saints Communion Letter

A Call to Healing, Unity, and Peace

Dear Friends,

We gather at this communion table as a family united by shared experiences, sacrifice, faith, and hope. We come together in fellowship, carrying our individual stories while embracing a common purpose.

The challenges of our time have left many communities carrying wounds of division, uncertainty, and loss. In response, we choose healing. We choose compassion, understanding, and the belief that communities grow stronger when people come together with respect and goodwill.

We honor those who have dedicated themselves to service. We recognize our veterans who carried the responsibilities of military service, our active duty personnel who continue their commitment to protecting others, our law enforcement officers who serve their communities, and our firefighters and emergency responders who answer calls for help during moments of crisis. Their dedication reflects courage, sacrifice, and a commitment to the well being of others.

Communion is a sacred act of remembrance, fellowship, and connection. It reminds us that every person is part of a larger community and that support, kindness, and compassion strengthen the bonds that unite us. Around this table, people of many backgrounds, traditions, and experiences gather in a shared spirit of peace and gratitude.

These values continue to guide us:

- Gratitude for those who serve and sacrifice.
- Commitment to caring for our communities and one another.
- Faith as a source of comfort, wisdom, and peace.
- Hope that inspires perseverance through every challenge.
- Respect for the dignity and worth of every person.

At the Union of Saints, we seek to cultivate a community of healing and belonging. We strive to create a place where veterans find support, first responders feel appreciated, families discover connection, and individuals are encouraged through compassion, truth, and peace.

As we lift our cup today, let us remember that we share this journey together. We share the responsibilities of community, the blessings of fellowship, and the opportunity to build a future rooted in understanding and goodwill.

Let us move forward with faith, courage, and peace. Let us strengthen the bonds that unite us and extend kindness to those around us. May we serve as a source of encouragement within our communities and a reflection of hope in the world.

With love, bravery, and strength,

Union of Saints
