

Dehumanizers-- “The Underground”

Instead of doing the right things, making the bed, preparing healthy food, supporting the family, paying the bills through honest work, and being upstanding citizens, they chose a different path.

They spent their time becoming skilled at profiting from those who did those good things. They were deliberate about who they targeted.

All of that energy they used to attack others could have been used for good. Instead, they chose to dehumanize people, to become attack artists, traffickers, underground criminals, and to violate the very covenants that sustain healthy societies and communities.

They committed acts of betrayal, of treason, against the spirit of anyone they could reach.

Often, the targets were women and young girls, they went for easier targets requiring least effort.

They took all of the manipulative skills they had developed and put them to work, near constantly, committing acts of violence and causing harm, instead of simply choosing to be good people.

They are not good people. They target good people. They absorb qualities from good people, then twist those same qualities into tools of manipulation.

The cycle repeats.

They are skilled dehumanizers, and they are not part of a healthy, functioning society.

This is why we call them the underground.

The Line of Division

The line between the aboveground and the underground is a line that should not be blurred, though often is. However, space and time, self protection, and personal safety create for US a great line of division, a fortress, a great wall.

Get your defenses up. Practice every day, and see the underground for what it is. Join us and become so attuned, that you actively fight it.
