

White Targeting Culture

These rapid, forced demographic shifts, resettlements, and changes have created societies in which what were once dominantly White cultures are now cultures in which Whites are becoming the minority and are being targeted. These are not small shifts. The experience resembles organized mob targeting dynamics in which White individuals may be stalked, traced, and then targeted. They may experience microaggressions, feel like they no longer fit in, and experience organized crime.

The experience is dramatic and immediate in certain places, such as Columbus, Ohio, which was once approximately 83% White and today is less than 50%. In some areas surrounding Columbus, the White population is less than 10%. These cultural changes and the accompanying dissonance may occur throughout America for White people as they witness their culture change rapidly into something else.

Unfortunately, due to cultural programming and extreme left propaganda, Whites have been told that they are simply supposed to accept it, to continue pouring their hearts out to everyone around them, to accept racism, to accept racial targeting even when it means they will be victimized, and to never speak about White suffering. They are told to suffer guilt because of historical wrongs such as slavery, even though most of premodern American society never participated in it, particularly in the North. White Native families actually fought slavery and suffered from it due to colonization.

It has become clear that these cultural differences are not small and that White people are being forced to assimilate, even though America has a long established historical culture and history. Demographic and cultural changes this rapid are hurtful and constitute a crime against humanity. However, when the addition of territorial control is experienced, such as psychological warfare, attempts to take over the airways, racism, violence, and racial targeting, the experience becomes civil war.

While in many American communities this war does not look like a traditional battlefield, the criteria of warfare have already been met. The modern name for the experience is Fourth Generational Warfare. The sickle symbology being used today within the left political arena is a powerful symbol because it expresses a “gentle grazing” experience while also being a known war symbol. Though the experience is not a traditional war in which militaries are used in active combat, the experience is street warfare, crimefare, proxy warfare, hybrid warfare, asymmetrical warfare, territorial warfare, guerrilla warfare, organized crime, and cultural warfare through activism and forced assimilation.

This is particularly directed against White Americans who are repeatedly vilified and expected to bear the burden and cost of other cultures, which resembles a form of modern indentured servitude. Even though they never participated in slavery, they have been made out to be the enemy and are now targeted through forms of modern slavery, including many forms of taxpayer exploitation. Much of the experience of modern warfare and slavery against American communities is political and financial, through force, fraud, and coercion.

These experiences are not subtle and are unfortunately causing a cultural genocide among White Americans, many of whom are minority cultured yet never had a voice within American society because their voices were suppressed, vilified, and made out to be the enemy. It is clear today, however, that more than ever, White Americans require protections. As other races have been afforded special protections, White targeting is no longer an isolated event but has become a mass atrocity, and for this reason, protections are required at the community and federal levels. Rights spaces belong to everyone. White humanity is not a political debate and never was, yet the left has convinced the public that it is perfectly okay to vilify, target, and dehumanize White Americans.

I support preserving the cultural beauty, love, and heart of historical communities without forced assimilation, and especially without incoming cultures whose members will actively target Whites. It is not simply a culture change. It is a modern war against the American people.

We must confront the storyline: how dare this be made about politics? To invite foreign cultures here that are cold as stone toward the American people and who hate and despise our culture? Who are territorial over the American people and their property? Americans for centuries worked to create the culture we have today out of the love of their hearts and to support American families who wanted to pass this onto our generations, our heritage, and our blood.

The experience is like taking a family home and a family business, along with all of their profits, and giving it away to a stranger who hates them and wants to hurt them. Imagine, this is the pain they are causing American families, and this is the “new normal” they have chosen for American culture. No different than World War II, a pandemic, a bird flu, a disease the Nazis used, today, unfortunately, the left has made its choice, it’s strategic movement very evident and clear. They have taken longstanding historical communities and turned them into war zones that are actively targeting those historical places, people, and cultures.

This is what Americans are up against. Rapid shifts, rapid changes, and a new world that wants to harm and target them. This modern war experience must be stopped. This is a warning, Americans! Don’t let WW3 in. Don’t let them take your culture!
