

The Dreams of American Children

American children once dreamed of growing up and filling their parents' roles, carrying forward the traditions and responsibilities of their families.

Today, we cannot even enjoy our culture without enduring hardship and movements that are genocidal and that seek to take our territory. This has become our "new normal."

You have taken everything from the American people.