

Our Assignment From Spirit Was Clear & Understanding “Translation”

Peace, Understanding the Slavery of God's Children, and Working to Free the Slaves

Our assignment from Spirit was clear, to seek peace, to understand the many forms of slavery affecting God's children, and to work toward freedom and healing.

Unfortunately, the struggle against slavery became far more complex than we had imagined. Even Nel was targeted. She devoted herself to understanding every aspect and reality that can lead toward slavery, recognizing abuse as one of its major pillars, along with power, control, and culture. Through safety, healthy boundaries, and a commitment to peace, we can move toward security and healing. Through God, and through love for ourselves and for others, we may discover our true paths. Truth and knowledge leads the way.

Sadly, our mission proved more difficult than we realized. We were unaware of the depth of the loss, suffering, and hardship affecting our communities. Through persistent work, dedication, and the efforts of many others alongside us, we gradually bridged the gaps and assembled the pieces of the puzzle. We came to better understand our shared reality through logic and reason, through investigations and case studies, and through our spiritual journey in which God strengthened our spirit, heart, and soul.

We acknowledge two experiences occurring at once, the individual human experience and the experience of humanity. At the same time, we recognize experiences of separation, division, and "parting of the waters." The pain and suffering have become profound, yet we remain anchored to reality. What is remarkable is that, while we are firmly grounded in truth, we are also uplifted by it. This journey is never stationary. It continually moves us forward.

We pray that others may find the path we walk. While remaining committed to our own safety, security, and strength through God, the Goddess, soul, and spirit, our dedication remains unwavering. We walk within God's Kingdom and the Goddess Queendom, our Heaven, reflected in water, light, and all of life itself. We carry the keys of Heaven entrusted to us and found within our hearts.

We also recognize that we must free ourselves from the chains others attempt to place upon us. Where we encounter hardship or injustice, we remember the spiritual armor God provides, the sword and the shield, and we understand that justice is part of both our human and spiritual experience. Wherever slavery exists, there are those who suffer and those who sacrifice. Our enduring mission is to pursue peace so that we may live in freedom, and so that our children may inherit this same peace and freedom. This is God's vision, and we share this vision.

We choose to live in the light of this truth and we choose to walk this path together.

In Ozirah's name we pray

~ So may it be, Amen

Our Assignment From Spirit Was Clear, Peace and Understanding the Slavery of God's Children and Working to Free the Slaves

Unfortunately, the slavery war became out of control. Even Nel was targeted. She worked to understand every aspect and reality that leads toward slavery. Abuse being a major pillar, power and control that lead to human and animal slavery. Culture as well. Through measures of both safety and boundaries, we can move ourselves to safety, and through peace and God, through the love of ourselves and others, we may find our true paths. Truth leads the way.

Sadly, our mission was more difficult than we realized. We were unaware of life loss and struggle that was affecting our communities. Through our hard work and dedication, and through the hard work and dedication of others, we were able to bridge the gaps and put the pieces of the puzzle together. We came to better understand our shared reality through logic and reason, through investigations and case studies, as God led us on this path and strengthened us through our spirit, heart, and soul.

We are acknowledging two experiences at once, the human and humanity experience, yet also the separation, divide, and "waters parting" experience. For the pain and suffering have become too great. We recognize our anchor to reality, and what is truly remarkable about this experience is that, though we are anchored to reality, we are also uplifted by it. Still, this experience is not stationary; it is always moving us forward.

We pray others find this path we walk. Though determined to ensure our own safety, security, and strength with God, Goddess, soul, and spirit, our commitment is unwavering. We are in God's Kingdom, or through the Santa's way or gate, with our keys, the Goddess Queendom, which is both a part of our Heaven, water and light, and all of life itself.

We realize we must free ourselves from the chains others place on us, and where we are attacked, we must remember the armor God gives us and entrusts to us, sword and shield. Justice, too, is a part of our human and spiritual experience. For where there is slavery, there is a martyr. And our ultimate mission is to ensure peace, so that we may be free, and our children may be free in this peace, as is the vision of God, and our vision with God is shared.

We live in light of this truth, we walk this path, and in Ozirah's name we pray.

So may it be, Amen.
